LINDBERGH FLIES BACK TO FRANCE

LINDBERGH COMING TO DAYTON

DAYTON, O., June 3.—Captain Charles Lindbergh who hopped from New York to Paris and international fame will visit this city to meet Orville Wright whose first flight Dec. 17, 1903 at Kitty Hawk, N. C., consumed just fifty-nine seconds.

Lindbergh, it was announced by Chamber of Commerce officials today, will visit Dayton after paying his respects to Washington, D. C., New York, St. Louis and Detroit.

Committees were busy being named today with the purpose of making the new hero's visit as great an event as was the homecoming of Orville and the late Wilbur Wright nearly a quarter century ago.

WILE SAYS:

Flood Relief Congress May Act What About Vare? Washington Notes

By FREDERIC WILLIAM WILE
Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright 1927

WASHINGTON, June 3.—President Coolidge has just had submitted to him an entirely new plan for a special session of congress to deal with the Mississippi flood. The plan contemplates a "limited" session to last not longer than ten days and to be confined strictly to relief and rehabilitation measures. The suggestion originates with members of the Louisiana delegation, who have formally laid it before the White House. Representative Bolivar E. Kemp, Democrat, of the sixth district, has worked out the most specific proposal and was given opportunity to elucidate it in detail at the president's desk.

A basic feature of Representative Kemp's proposal is that leaders of both parties should agree in advance to ban politics at the "flood session" and devote it exclusively to the business for which house and senate were specially convened. There would, in particular, according to the Kemp scheme, be no effort to organize either house of the seventieth congress. In the lower branch a speaker pro-tem would be appointed, while no committee in either house would be needed, as flood legislation would be brought directly to the floor in each body.

The Louisiana delegation, which conferred with the president, did not come away with any assurance of his interes in its proposals though

KENTUCKY'S FLOOD DEATH TOLL STANDS AT FORTY-SIX NOW

Refugees Tell Story Of Cloudburst—Relief Started

LEXINGTON, Ky., June 3.—Kentucky's flood death toll reached forty-six when Morgan and Elliott County refugees made their first appearance here, bringing tales of twelve known deaths and unconfirmed reports of at least ten more, as a result of Sunday's cloudburst which wrecked several hundred homes and made at least 20,000 miners jobless. A conservative estimate of mine property, farms and utilities places the property ty loss at $2,000,000.

At Frankfort, Gov. Fields today authorized the use of $2,000 for a preliminary emergency fund and detailed Dr. P. E. Clarkerby, assistant state health officer and Engineer H. S. Jacobson to the storm swept area.

Newspapers here at Frankfort, Louisville and the larger cities of the state have begun a flood relief campaign to assist the homeless and jobless.

The other counties where deaths were reported are Letcher, Floyd, Johnson, Harlan and Perry Counties. The latter counties were swept by feeder waters of the Big Sandy. Morgan County was swept by the Licking River and Elliott County by the source waters of the Little Sandy.

MANDELL MAY NOT BE HELD IN DEATH

KANSAS CITY, Kan., June 3.—An investigation into the circumstances surrounding the death of Steve Adams, Chicago boxer, in his fight Wednesday night with Sammy Mandell, lightweight champion, today had revealed no grounds on which Mandell could be prosecuted, according to A. J. Melliott, county attorney here.

Mandell, who left last night for Chicago in company with his manager and an attorney, is prepared to return at the instance of authorities here.

A coroner's inquest will be held today or tomorrow to determine the exact cause of Adams' death.

CHAMBERLIN PLANS HOP BY AIR TO BERLIN

Believe Bellanca Will Leave For Europe Friday

MINEOLA, N. Y., June 3.—The Bellanca monoplane, Columbia, piloted by Clarence D. Chamberlin, will hop off from here to some point in Europe, probably Berlin, late this afternoon or tonight, according to plans announced today.

Chamberlin will be accompanied by a navigator whose name was not revealed. The navigator is said to be a former navy aviator.

Charles A. Levine, president of the Columbia Aircraft Corporation which is backing the flight, today was in telephonic communication with the office of the National Aeronautical Association in Washington. Levine asked that officials be sent to Curtis field to make an official record of the take-off.

Carl F. Schory, chairman of the contest committee of the association, was expected to leave Washington immediately for the Long Island field.

AUTHORITIES FAIL TO LOCATE MISSING ANTIOCH STUDENT

Place No Credence In Suicide Theory—Search Continues

Information has been received by Antioch College officials that George Frederick Adshead, 22, missing student, purchased a ticket for Dayton and boarded a Dayton and Xenia Railway Co. traction car last Friday. It is not known at what hour he went to Dayton but the information constitutes the first clew obtained in the quiet inquiry being conducted by college officals and authorities.

Little progress is being made in the quiet search being conducted for George Frederick Adshead, 22, Antioch College special student, who disappeared Friday leaving a note indicating he would not return.

College officials scout the suicide theory but, nevertheless, a thorough search was made of hills and ravines in the vicinity without avail.

Ill health and a tendency toward despondency because of his physical condition is set up as the probable motive behind the disappearance, which did not come as a great surprise to members of the faculty, in as much as Adshead had often talked of going away and "starting life anew."

School friends express the opinion the student vanished because he was tired of college and its environment, rather than from any desire to end his life.

At the time of his disappearance, he wore a white sweater and gray trousers, the sweater having a band of black and yellow at the bottom. Adshead is five feet, seven inches tall, weighs about 130 pounds and has blond hair.

KING BEN HID IN HOME WHILE SOUGHT

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., June 3.—"King" Benjamin Purnell was hiding in his House of David colony while a nation wide search supposedly was on for him, Thomas Atkin, former cult member testified today at the states dissolution suit against the cult.

"Was Benjamin hiding in the colony for the last three years while warrants were out for his arrest?" Prosecutor George H. Brookwalter asked.

"Yes, I personally saw him, and I also saw young girls with him in the diamond house during that time," the witness said.

Wife Loved Two Says Chaplin

COUNTER CHARGES SAY LITA ATTENDED DRINKING PARTIES

Action Will Bring Case To Speedy Trial, Is Said

LOS ANGELES, June 3.—Counter-charges by Charlie Chaplin that his young wife had love affairs with two men for whom, he said, she neglected her home and babies to attend gay drinking parties, today prompted attorneys for Lita Grey Chaplin to move for a speedy trial of her divorce suit against the film comedian.

With the possibility of a settlement of the Chaplin's marital difficulties out of court apparently blocked by the comedian's cross-suit for divorce, Mrs. Chaplin's counsel indicated her answer would be filed next week, thus paving the way for the trial within thirty days, the earliest prescribed by law.

Meanwhile, the actor's lawyers here were scrutinizing Mrs. Chaplin's deposition, just completed, which is expected to be used as an additional legal weapon for the comedian in the impending court fight.

Chaplin's suit, filed in superior court here, was in the form of a cross-complaint; accompanied by an answer to his wife's divorce action in which he denied her charges of cruelty.

The two men with whom Chaplin alleges his wife associated were not named in the complaint. They were referred to as "a certain young man" and as an "automobile salesman," whom Chaplin "disliked" and of whom he "entirely disapproved."

The comedian charged Mrs. Chaplin was "infatuated" with "a certain young man" and continued to associate with him despite her husband's remonstrances, meeting him secretly and inviting him to her home while Chaplin was at work.

His wife confided to friends, Chaplin asserted, that she was "crazy about" an "automobile salesman," with whom she was "being seen in public places, dancing at all hours of the night and drinking liquor."

Chaplin further charged that his wife "habitually occupied her time dancing in hotels, cafes and beach resorts in and near Los Angeles," thereby "absenting herself from her home to the grievious neglect of her two children." On numerous occasions, the comedian accused, his wife did not return home until two and three o'clock in the morning and often she was accompanied by the anonymous automobile man. Frequently she invited him to the Chaplin home and entertained him and others "at which times liquor was drunk to excess."

When he remonstrated, Chaplin stated, his wife became angered and replied that she did not intend to change her mode of life to please him and suggested that he arrange for a divorce.

At the same time, Chaplin said, his wife asked him "coldly what financial arrangements" he would make with her in the event of a divorce. He assured her, he said, that he would give her all that she was entitled to under the law, without litigation. In this connection, Chaplin estimated his fortune at $1,250,000, of which he claimed only $266,932.63 was community property.

Complaining that the Chaplin home was "big and gloomy" and that the "atmosphere" was making her "nervous," Mrs. Chaplin, according to the actor's suit, "increased her indulgence in vain and frivolous pleasures, drank liquor to excess and while under the influence of liquor conducted herself in an unwomanly and undignified manner."

The comedian also charged his wife with "ruinous extravagance" and said she spent $10,000 on her recent voyage to Honolulu.

Chaplin alleged his wife's divorce suit had stigmatized their elder son, Charles Spencer, Jr., who now is 22 months of age. The other Chaplin child, Sidney Earle, is thirteen months old. Chaplin seeks the custody of both.

FLOOD MEETING MAY SPLIT

WASHINGTON EXCITEDLY PREPARES TO GIVE LINDBERGH ROYAL WELCOME

WASHINGTON, June 3.—A fever of excitement gripped the national capital today as officials and citizens began to count the hours until an American youth steps into a limelight usually reserved for presidents, kings and queens.

Capt. Charles Lindbergh, master of the Atlantic, will be accorded not only the highest honors of potentates but will be paid the enthusiastic homage of a half million plain Americans in a wild jubilee.

While Capt. Lindbergh is coming to Washington to meet the president of the United States, his first great thrill will be a mother's if Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, who is deserting her schoolroom in Detroit to meet her famous son, wills, she will be the first to greet him as he steps from the cruiser Memphis here.

The task of sheltering Mrs. Lindbergh from curious crowds will fall to Mrs. Coolidge, whose guest she will be at the temporary White House. Mrs. Lindbergh, it was said, may either board the Memphis down the river, greet her son at the presidential dock in the Washington navy yard or join the President and Mrs. Coolidge at Washington monument where Capt. Lindbergh and the President will meet.

Cognizant of criticism which the transfer of Capt. Lindbergh's reception from New York to Washington has evoked in some quarters, the cabinet and citizens committees have doubled their efforts to make the welcome the greatest in Washington's history.

The plane was in two crates weighing three tons, one being forty-seven feet long. It was placed on the after-deck with the guns and two small aeroplanes.

The Memphis sailed for Cherbourg at 1:30 and Captain Lindbergh will go aboard there tomorrow.

Vice-Admiral Burrage stated that he expects the Memphis to arrive in Washington at 11 a. m., June 11.

CEDARVILLE KEEPS M'CHESNEY; TURNS DOWN OTHER OFFERS

College Trustees Vote Increase — President Twelve Years

Dr. W. R. McChesney, president of Cedarville College twelve years, informed trustees of his decision to remain with the institution "indefinitely," at the annual board meeting Thursday afternoon.

Trustees received President McChesney's decision with much satisfaction and voluntarily voted to increase his annual salary to $3,500 per year, an increase of $1,000, in recognition of this thirty-three years of service for the college and the progress made during this period.

Dr. McChesney declined offers to accept the chair of systematic theology at Lane Seminary, Cincinnati, and to become dean of Muskingum College, New Concord, O., in deciding to remain at Cedarville. During his educational career he has received a total of nine offers to become identified with larger institutions but declined them all.

Dr. McChesney came to Cedarville thirty-three years ago in July when the institution was being founded and prior to being elected president twelve years ago, served as secretary, as dean and as vice-president. At that time the college was established outside the village on the Columbus Pike on the old McMillan property.

During his period of association with the college, the Carnegie library and science hall and the Alford Memorial gymnasium were established and Dr. McChesney has been largely instrumental in placing the school on a firmer basis.

In the first year thirty-six students composed the student body and in 1927 the student enrollment had increased to 243, indicating the great strides made during the intervening years. The original endowment was $20,000 in comparison with the endowment now of $208,000. There have been more than 300 graduates of the college.

Educational work of Cedarville College is also recognized in forty-five other states in this country.

ATTACK BY HATCHET WOMAN ON SOCIETY MATRON BAFFLING

Architect's Wife Is Recovering From Blows On Head

NEW YORK, June 3.—Detectives searching for the mysterious "hatchet woman" who assailed Mrs. Edith Catlin Phelps, socially prominent, were baffled today in their efforts to establish the motive for the attack.

Mrs. Phelps was struck on the head with a hatchet in the doorway of her home by a smartly dressed woman about thirty-five years old as she delivered a box of flowers. Mrs. Phelps was hit with the blunt end of the hatchet, a light, nickel-steel affair. As she sank into a chair, screaming, the woman struck her again.

Quietly, the mysterious assailant walked out the front door and disappeared. It is believed that an automobile was waiting for her.

Failing to find support for any other theory the polcie believe the woman was demented.

Mrs. Phelps, who is the wife of Stowe Phelps, prominent architect, was taken to Presbyterian Hospital where, it was said this morning, her condition will not prove serious unless complications develop.

Policemen assigned to the fashionable neighborhood where the Phelps live said they had observed for more than a week an automobile with three men parked a few doors from the Phelps home.

ORA SLATER INVESTIGATING MYSTERY ABOUT YOUTH'S DEATH

CLYDE, O., June 3.—Ora Slater, Cincinnati detective, prominent in the Nesbitt murder case at Troy and the Don Mellett case at Canton, was in Clyde today investigating the two months old mystery surrounding the death of Robert "Bobby" Wilson, 17, of this city, whose body, badly mutilated, was found near the Wheeling and Lake Erie railroad here last March 31.

Slater declared he had been requested to investigate the case several weeks ago, but owing to his presence being necessary at Canton in connection with the Mellett case, he was unable to get away until Thursday. He expects to remain in Clyde several days, he said.

The detective visited the dead youth's father yesterday, and also the undertaker who prepared the boy's body for burial. Later he conferred with city and county authorities regardnig the case.

Slater this morning refused to say whether he had unearthed any important clues in the case.

TWO SOUGHT IN DOUBLE MURDER PROBE

WILKESBARRE, Pa., June 3.—Search for the slayers of Jennie Monica, 19, and Edith Fonzo, 20, cousins, whose battered bodies were found in a lonely field near Pittston, Pa., yesterday, today centered on efforts to learn the identities of two youths with whom the girls are believed to have spent Memorial Day.

The girls' bodies, strangled and bullet riddled, were found near the wrecked car of Carmel Marranca, 34, of Pittston, who contended the machine had been stolen from in front of his home. Marranca's brother, Samuel, 22, who drive the car the day before the bodies were found, is sought.

Police today checked the list of known acquaintances of the two girls, in an effort to learn if they had been seen often in the company of any particular pair.

The girls had apparently been attacked and then choked to death. Bullet wounds in the bodies indicated shots had been fired at close range.

The car in which they were believed to have been slain, was found nearby, wrecked, with several bullet holes in the sides.

RELIEF DEMAND IS IMMEDIATE BANKERS STATE

Delegates Attempt To Force Action In Area At Once

CHICAGO, June 3.—A demand that immediate relief measures be considered, today threatened to split the middle western flood control conference as it swung into the second day of its deliberations over a plan to permanently tame the turbulent Mississippi and its tributaries.

Although the conference was called to consider plans for permanent flood control, a determined group of bankers, supported by delegates from regions hardest hit by the inundation, today were preparing to carry a fight for relief action to the floor of the convention.

Randle T. Moore, Shreveport, La., banker, one of the leaders of the relief forces, declared the victims could not wait for congressional action.

"The disaster facing the people of the flood area cannot be helped six months hence," he said. "It must be considered now or it may be too late. I am disappointed that no action for financial relief is proposed by the leaders of this conference."

With the task of perfecting an organization completed, committees were studying the problem today with a view to submitting several proposals to the delegates for final action.

"We hope to work out a practicable proposal behind which all of us can be united at the next session of congress," Senator Watson, (R), Ind., chairman of the resolutions committee declared today.

"Several plans are under discussion but we hope to agree upon one."

The twenty-seven states represented at the conference were virtually unanimous in agreeing the problem must be handled by the federal government.

"Louisiana cannot afford to pay for a new levee system," said Governor John E. Martineau. "The problem affects the entire country directly or indirectly and should be solved by the federal government."

One proposal, calling upon the president to appoint a committee of engineers, business men, economists and agricultural experts to confer with army engineers, now in charge of flood control and report their findings to the president and congress, was being widely supported.

It was introduced by Rep. Porter, (R) Penna., one of the administration leaders in the house and was regarded as representing the president's attitude.

CURIOSITY COST CHARLEY $1,000

NEW YORK, June 3.—Charlie was curious.

When Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh prepared to hop off from New York to Paris he wondered if the newspapers would notice his modest effort. So he left orders for a clipping bureau to dig up any items the newspapers might print.

Today, with two carloads of newspapers already piled up with an obligation of more than $1,000 for clipping service, Mrs. Evangeline L. Lindbergh, mother of the trans-Atlantic hero, ordered them stopped.

The order was transmitted through Henry Woodhouse, president of the Aerial League of America.

ACE REACHES PARIS FIELD AFTER DELAY OCCASIONED BY FOG

Stunts Over Channel Staged By Flyer Despite Heavy Mist

PARIS, June 3.—Captain Charles A. Lindbergh was a boy in short trousers when the World War was being fought, but today he was made an honorary member of the Lafayette Escadrille, one of the most famous air fighting units of the war.

At a luncheon at the International League of Aviators Dr. Edmund L. Gros, founder of the Lafayette Escadrille, presented Lindbergh with a medal making him the only honorary member of the escadrille.

PARIS, June 3. — Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh, America's hero of the skies, arrived back in Paris today. He landed at Le Bourget flying field at 10:02 o'clock after a battle with fog that delayed his flight from London.

Flying at a great height and unescorted by any other plane, Lindbergh arrived over Le Bourget flying field shortly before 10 o'clock. He circled over the field several times descending into lower altitude at each spiral and then made a perfect landing.

Attaches of the flying field rushed out to greet him and congratulate him upon his venturesome flight from England.

Lindbergh had left Kenley airdrome, near London, at 6:20 o'clock, but had to descend at Lympne, on the English side of the channel at 6:58 and was detained there about an hour and fifteen minutes until the fog lifted over the water when he again hopped off at 8:13 o'clock. This time he was able to continue on to Le Bourget without further interruption although the air was thick with mist.

Having been disappointed once (when fog prevented Lindbergh from making his flight yesterday) the French did not turn out in such great numbers as had been expected.

In view of the fact that this visit is "unofficial" there were no ceremonies at the flying field after the American arrived.

Lindbergh made a double landing. His machine came down first upon the civil aviators' field, but as it lightly touched the ground Lindbergh decided that he ought to land in military ground as he was flying a British fighting plane, so he took off and flew very low over the intervening ground to the military hangars only 500 yards away.

The American flew in a British royal air force fighting plane that had been placed at his disposal for the trip. He was escorted as far as the channel by British machines, which turned back at that point.

Immediately after Lindbergh's arrival twelve French military airplanes went up and began flying formation stunts in honor of the American.

Lindbergh watched with keen interest the graceful evolutions of the planes above the flying ground, noting the skill of the French pilots. It was a high honor for a civilian flyer, but Lindbergh's courage and skill are

ARREST ALLEGED MURDERER OF GIRL

DETROIT, June 3.—Leo Penkowski, 22, alias Leo Penn, was arrested here early today and held for Cleveland police on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death there of Elizabeth Skrebis, 20, Monday.

The girl was taken to a hospital by two young men. When the physician pronounced her dead, they fled. Later, Tom Basmagy alias Tom Taylor surrendered to Cleveland police and furnished the name of his companion, who was traced to Detroit.

Basmagy told the police that the girl consented to ride with them, but objected to the route they had taken, and jumped out of the car. She jumped backward and fell, her head striking the pavement.

2,500,000 Russians Await Call to Arms; Soviet Forces a Threat to Half of World

By NICHOLAS GOLPIN,
International Illustrated News Staff Correspondent.
Copyright, 1927, (I-I-N).

MOSCOW, (I-I-N Special).—The greatest army in Europe is now at the command of Soviet Russia.

It's a far flung, well equipped army of greater comparative power than the German Imperial Army before the war.

Exact figures are unobtainable. The war office has denied the assertion of the British War Secretary that there are ten million reserves, but a conservative estimate places the number of men under arms and available for immediate mobilization at two and a half million. Voroshilof, Minister of War and in high command of the Soviet forces, in a public speech, boasted of 600,000 men under arms, 100,000 of which are non-commissioned officers. It is safe to say that there are at least three reservists for every active soldier.

The army is divided into three corps: the regulars, territorials, and reserves. As high as 900,000 men a year can be put through the reserves. The better reservists are sent to cadet schools and later military academies for commissioning as reserve officers.

Russian strength does not lie in men alone, although those under arms are well trained. Vast munition factories, for which many of the technical experts have been drawn from Germany, are ready to start war production. It is estimated that a million rifles, five hundred million cartridges, and five thousand machine guns could be added to the Russian stores in a year's time. An actual declaration of war would probably increase the theoretical production.

Russia has a powerful air fleet, too. There are close to 2,000 flying machines available, and twenty factories, now operating, could easily be converted into war purposes.

The Soviet is conducting experiments in poison gas, and her factories and laboratories are now said to be in a high state of efficiency.

"We have invented an anti-gas, and a new mask that will resist all known poisons," boasted Voroshiloff in a recent address.

Tanks, too, are being made, and practically every other known weapon used in the great war or invented since. The navy, too, has been rehabilitated, and is a greater force than any of those of neighboring countries.

Russia has publicly adopted an unprovocative attitude toward foreign nations. Causes for war, as witness the latest exchange with the Pekinese Government, are studiously avoided. Yet the armament programme goes on unabated.

Yet on every front there are rumblings. In China, Soviet aid has been given to the Cantonese forces. Relations with the Pekinese forces are still current that Russian strength are stillcurrent that Russian strength will be thrown with the Cantonese against the Northerners.

Russian influence is being felt in India. Alleged Soviet agitators have time and again threatened British dominance there and in Persia. There are boundary disputes in the Caucasus.

Rumania and Poland look with the same suspicion on Russia that the Soviet looks upon these countries. Both countries carry heavy armaments. The danger of war from these quarters is mentioned by Russians in official speeches. North of Poland are three little States, Lithuania, Esthonia and Latvia, each a potential spark of an international blaze.

War is almost certain to break out in some quarter, though at the moment of writing, all disputes are dormant.

Perhaps Russia believes that a strong army and navy will force her neighbors to hold peace at all cost. Perhaps she knows that war is inevitable, and is determined to come out victor, no matter from which point of the compass it comes.

EASTERN OHIO BUSINESS MEN OPPOSE REVENUE OFFICE MOVE

A delegation of seventy-five Columbus business men and representatives from a number of cities in the central part of the state, motored to the home of United States Senator Simeon D. Fess at Yellow Springs Friday morning and conferred with the senator regarding the proposed consolidation of the internal revenue office for the southern half of Ohio.

The party included the Board of Directors of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce and representatives from Zanesville, Newark, Steubenville, Mt. Vernon, Jackson, Lancaster, Chillicothe, Circleville, Maysville, Logan, Pomeroy and London.

The trip was made in the interest of consolidation of the collector's office at Columbus and the delegates presented figures tending to show why Columbus should be favored over Cincinnati should the offices in these cities be consolidated by the treasury department, in its plan to bring about an annual saving of $100,000.

Senator Fess, while not taking a stand on the question, declared after the conference, it will be a "matter of duty" for him to refer the data with which he was provided, to the treasury department at Washington, D. C.

Senator Fess declared the treasury department plans to consolidate the four internal revenue offices in Ohio now located at Columbus, Cincinnati, Cleveland and Toledo into two offices in the southern and northern sections of the state.

The senator said that in a letter to the department, he had assumed treasury officials would favor the two large cities having the largest collection and more efficiently equipped for this work, if the number of offices are to be reduced from four to two, but that his only connection with the controversy will be to forward data given him on the matter to the department. He will make no recommendations, he said.

The visiting delegation Friday had as its only purpose presentation of data showing why Columbus should be favored over Cincinnati. It was a notable assemblage, which included prominent heads of Columbus business firms and two Ohio State university officials.

The fact his sister-in-law took suddenly ill Thursday night defeated the plan of Congressman John C. Speaks to be present at the conference.

At the request of the visitors, Senator Fess conducted his guests on a tour of Antioch College. Many also spent the latter part of the morning inspecting the flower garden at the Fess home, which is particularly beautiful at this time of the year with the flowers in full bloom. Part of the delegation returned at once to their homes while a few stayed in Yellow Springs through the noon hour.

Warns Middle-Aged Women To Watch These Danger Signs

Thousands of women at the changing time of life are in serious danger—because of poisonous waste matter accumulating in the system, polluting the blood stream and overworking the heart and kidneys, often resulting in chronic hepatic torpidity, gall bladder inflammation or even gall stones.

The symptoms—danger signs—that should be closely watched are dizziness, headaches, shortness of breath, gas in stomach and bowels, pressure or sharp pains in right side that often shoot through to the back, coated tongue, bad breath, lack of ambition, weakness, nervousness, and nights of restless misery.

Failure to heed 'these warning signs" in time may mean months or even years of miserable ill health and perhaps a dangerous surgical operation!

Everyone near or past middle life should guard against hepatic torpidity or any form of gall bladder trouble. And in the opinion of the writer one of the best things in the world for conditions of this kind is the inexpensive home use of Klax-Ko tablets, which Sayre's Drug Store or any other good druggist supply on a binding guarantee to refund their cost, if genuinely beneficial results are not obtained inside of a week! "Klax-Ko" tablets have brought new life and health to hundreds, and they must positively do the same for you or their use will not cost you a penny. Try them today. —Adv.

Your "Regular" Pain Now Needless

Menstruation is a perfectly natural process, but the painful part is NEEDLESS. Long study has absolutely conquered menstrual pain. Science now offers women reliable and complete relief in a simple, utterly harmless tablet called midol.

This newest achievement of the laboratory has nothing to do with drastic habit-forming drugs that kill pain by benumbing the whole system! Midol acts directly on the organs affected by menstruation, and nowhere else. Yet relief and absolute comfort come in five to seven minutes!

So, why have a twinge of pain—feel "low" or even uncomfortable! Or take anything to depress the heart or upset the system? All drug stores have midol in a thin aluminum box that tucks in purse or pocket—for 50 cents.

CITY MUST CONDEMN PROPERTY TO PROTECT PURE WATER SUPPLY

City officials and State Health Director John E. Munger have been informed by Attorney General Edward C. Turner that the city of Xenia is without power, by ordinance, to regulate the use to which property adjacent to the municipal waterworks plant at Old Town may be put, in order to protect its water supply drawn from wells outside the city limits.

It is within the city's power, however, to appropriate sufficient land by condemnation proceedings to protect its supply, the attorney general ruled.

The attorney general's opinion had been asked for by Dr. Munger and city officials in view of an investigation made of supply wells at the Od Town station and the possibility of contamination in the immediate vicinity.

The eight of ten acres of land in question are located west of the Springfeld Pike and north of the mill race and lots had been sold by the owner for the purpose of erecting summer cottages. The decision means that the city cannot regulate this land by ordinance in prohibiting the presence of waste matter in the vicinity in order to prevent contamination of wells, but that its only recourse, is by condemnation proceedings.

The decision follows:

"Where water supply of a municipality is obtained from wells, the waterworks plant being located outside the corporation line, then the city commission cannot buy ordinary protection to protect the supply from possible contamination, resulting in the use of adjacent property by its owners."

"Such municipalities," Turner said, "in order to insure the purity of water, should proceed to appropriate under section 3677 and following numbers of the General Code, as much adjacent property as is necessary to prevent pollution of the water."

The city had been required of Dr. Munger to enact an ordinance regulating the use to which property adjoining the water supply may be put, and officials were doubtful whether it was operative.

Old Folks Say Doctor Caldwell is Right

When a man is in the 83rd year of his life, there are certain things he has learned that only time can teach him. The basis of treating sickness has not changed since I left Medical College in 1875, nor since I placed on the market the laxative prescription I had used in my practice, known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Then, the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of my Dr. Caldwell's' Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of Egyptian Senna and other mild laxative herbs, with pepsin.

New medicines are constantly brought out for constipation that contain calomel (which is mercury), salts of various kinds, phenolphthalein (which is acid and coal tar), and minerals. These are all drastic purges, many of them dangerous, and the medical profession is warning the public against them. Certain coal tar products which are offered to people so much nowadays, irritate and poison the tissue of the stomach, intestine, and bowel. Most salts thin the blood and carry off the vital body fluids, making you aenemic and rheumatic.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs which are usually disguised as candy or chewing gum.

W. B. Caldwell M D

AT AGE 83

My remedy, too, costs less than most others; only about a cent a dose. A bottle of it will last a family several months, and all can use it. It is good for the baby because pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. In the proper dose, given in the directions, it is equally effective at all ages. Elderly people will find it especially ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles. —Adv.

An uncle came to visit relatives here in the Xenia community not long ago. "Now don't you folks go to any trouble for me," he said, "I'm on a diet and I only eat the simplest kind of meals. Now for breakfast all I want is a cereal and some kind of fruit, three or four pieces of toast, some wheat cakes and coffee!"

Whereupon the host slipped out and ordered some extra supplies.

BIBLE THOUGHT

A NEW CREATION:—Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me. Psalm 51:10.

PREVENTING GREAT FLOODS

Issuing a warning that "this year of floods may be followed by others even more severe," Dr. F. H. Newell, distinguished waterways engineer and former chief of the United States Reclamation Service, calls for a comprehensive plan of protection which will embrace the entire Mississippi river system.

Selfish local and sectional politics have resulted in the building of a system of levees, strong at some points and week at others, consequently ineffective as a whole, Dr. Newell charges.

He advocates, subject to thorough engineering study, the building of a federal controlled levee system provided with a series of spillways located at strategic points through which flood waters could be released gradually into unoccupied or sparsely settled lowlands when the danger point is reached. It is theoretically possible, he says, to build, at enormous cost, levees high enough to withstand any possible combination of floods from the seven rivers which make up the Mississippi system, but he questions both the engineering wisdom and economic advantage of such a project.

A suggestion for utilization of spillway areas is made by Dr. Albert Shaw, editor of the Review of Reviews in a discussion of engineering opinion on the problem.

"These areas would assume the character of lakes in one season and of swamps in another," he points out. "They could be utilized for the growth of cypress, the gum and other valuable forest trees that thrive in wet and swampy places."

BAD TEMPER EXPENSIVE

"The temper of a man determines the nature of his relation to society," according to Dr. Henry Knight Miller, widely known psychologist. "You are popular or unpopular, loved or despised, promoted to successful achievement or held in limitation and failure, in large part according to your prevailing tempers, be they good or evil," he contends.

"A man of persistent good temper is loved, respected and cultivated," continues Dr. Miller, "while the ill-tempered man is indeed his own worst enemy. He makes friends only to loose them. Opportunities pregnant with golden possibilities are lost because of his uncontrolled and unlovely temper. He soothes his jaded sensibilities with copious draughts of self appreciation, hates society, snarls at all who antagonize him and sinks lower and lower into the slough of despond, into the morbid quicksand of his own distorted imagination."

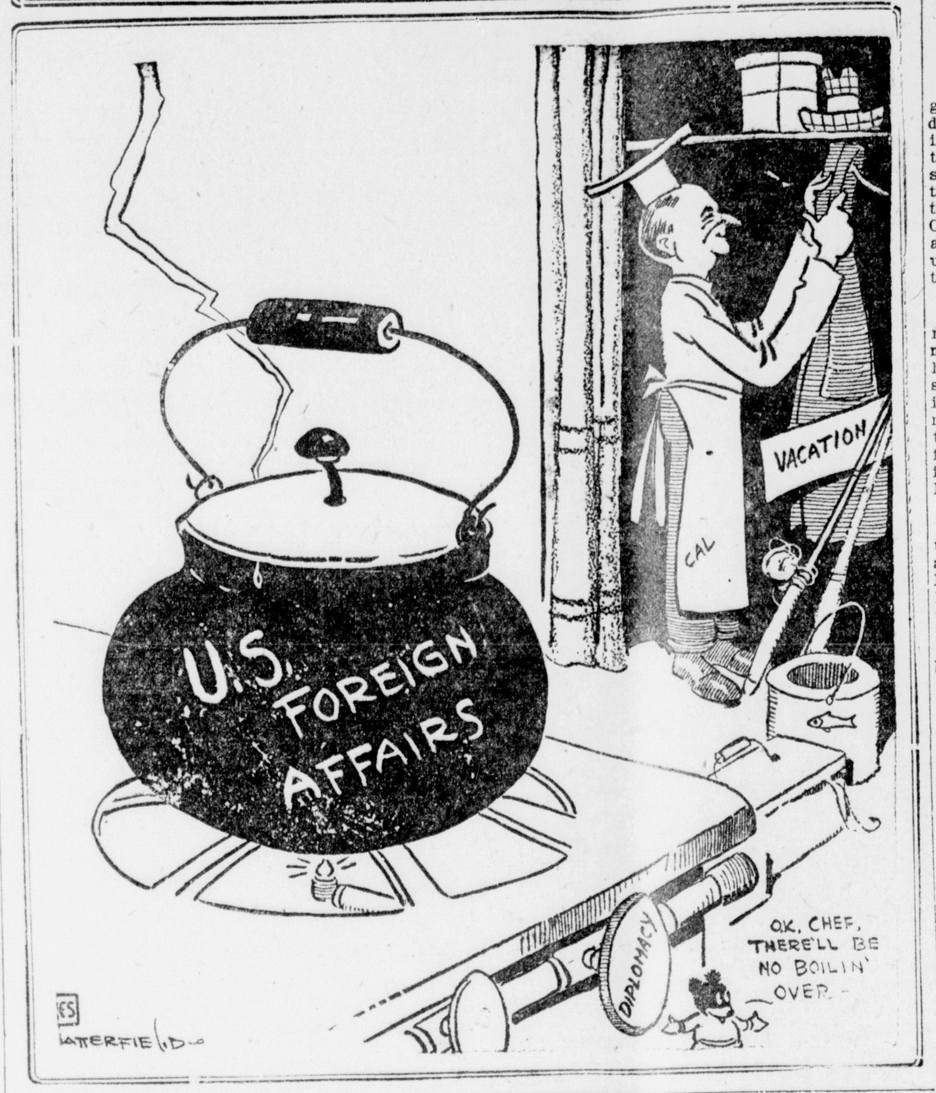

Dr. Miller emphasizes the fact that good temper is a product of culture. He says, "it is a result of self mastery, control of negative emotions, proper perspective, sound philosophy of life and a sense of humor."

On the other hand he points out, in Psychology Magazine, a man who is at war with himself, whose inner consciousness knows no harmony, is ill tempered because of his lack of inner poise. He says, "One basic cause of bad temper is selfishness. Start to form habits of unselfishness. Of course, no sane man will neglect his own interests and welfare but he can at the same time manifest an intense interest in the welfare of others and in building a habit of unselfishness he will advance far in the achievement of good temper. The cultivation of a sense of humor is another great aid."

NOT SO HOPELESS

The English are proclaimed as being slow at recognizing humor, but some of them are certainly clever at coining phrases. Lord Dennison some time ago gave this advice to young men: "Don't marry for money—you can borrow it cheaper." Lady Astor is credited with having declared during a debate on the question of giving married women the right to hold jobs, that "women might have twins every year and yet be more efficient than many members of Parliament." Still another member of parliament declared that "God did not make the two sexes equal and Parliament cannot do it in one Friday afternoon." When they get to indulging in repartee members of Parliament are about as clever and apt as found anywhere.

Let's Go

KELLYGRAMS by FRED C. KELLY

WHEN A MAN'S UNDER ORDERS

I talked recently to a lawyer friend, assigned by the court to defend a man charged with murder, and he thinks his client is guilty.

He is obliged to put up some kind of defense, but he doesn't like the job.

"Why don't you refuse to do it?" I asked.

"Because," he explained, "somebody has to do it and if I refuse I shall be in contempt of court."

Then I thought of an actor I know who is under contract to a big producer and obliged to obey orders. He has been assigned to a part in which he must say vulgar lines that he can't utter in public without loss of self-respect.

Why, you ask, doesn't he refuse to play such a part? Because he is obliged to make a living at the only kind of work he knows, and if he breaks his contract he would have difficulty in getting another job. He would probably not only lose all hope of further association with the producer he now works for, but would become known to other theatrical employers as a man difficult to handle. Not being an important enough figure to dictate his own terms, he must do the best he can and carry out orders, even at times when they are not to his liking.

It occasionally happens, in every walk of life, that a man doing something he isn't proud of is more to be pitied than censured.

The real blame should not be attached to a man who is an unfortunate victim of conditions, but on those who cause such conditions.

Not long ago an actress spent ten days in jail for appearing in a play called immoral.

If the play really was objectionable the chances are that it wasn't her fault. The ones who should have been arrested were members of the audience whose purchases at the box-office made the play profitable.

Here is a dandy way to discourage a dirty play or a stupid movie: Don't go to it!

How to Achieve Beauty

EXERCISES FOR REDUCING IN SPECIAL PARTS OF THE BODY

Yesterday I gave you several exercises which, if consistently practiced, together with the faithful observance of a sensible diet, will materially aid in reducing overweight and generally proportionalizing the entire body. But for those women who are not burdened with overweight in general, and only want to reduce in special spots, such as the chin, the upper arms and shoulders, the abdomen and waist, or the hips and thighs, I suggest the following:

In practicing any of these exercises, begin slowly at first, gradually increasing in vigor. See that your clothing is loose and that the room is filled with good fresh air. Do them regularly and consistently. You must make them part of your daily routine if you would achieve really worthwhile results.

To Reduce a Double Chin—Place hands on hips, turn the head sharply to the left, until the chin appears above the left shoulder. Hold this position and lower your head backwards, turning your face toward the ceiling. Raise. Repeat ten times slowly but vigorously. Do the same to the right.

2. With hands on hips and body in standing position, twist the trunk to the left and lower your head backward as in exercise number one. Keeping the head turned toward the ceiling, twist the trunk as far as possible to the right. Return the trunk to first position and raise your head. Repeat, this time beginning to the right. Alternating left and right—repeat ten times.

3. Lift the chest high and make all the muscles of the neck tense. Then bend the head slowly downward toward the chest as if overcoming strong resistance. Raise the head slowly. Repeat five times. Then do this exercise five more times, bending the head diagonally and downward, right, toward the chest. Repeat five times, bending the head downward and diagonally to the left.

To Reduce the Upper Arms and Shoulders.—1. Raise the arms sideward to shoulder level, turning the palms up. Bend the arms at elbows until the forearms make a right angle with the upper arms. Now, keeping the elbows at shoulder level rotate the arms forward. Return to position. Repeat ten times.

2. Raise left arm forward and upward and the right arm downward and backward. Reverse the arm position with a forcible swing, the left arm moving downward and backward and the right arm forward and upward. Repeat ten times.

3. Raise the arms sidewise to shoulder level, turning the palms down. Keeping the elbows stiff, make a complete circle inward with the right arm, swinging it down, across and in front of the body, up and back to original position. Do the same thing with the left arm. Repeat, alternating right and left, ten times.

4. Raise the arms sidewise and upward and clap the hands high over the head, swing the arms sidewise and downward, clap the hands behind your head, repeat ten times.

INTERRUPTIONS

WHEN I sit down with my mending
The puss jumps in my lap,
And curls up on the stockings
To take a little nap.

The twins climb up in the evening
As I'm answering my mail,
And tease for a game or a romping
Or a rousing pirate's tale.

Friends drop in when I'm cleaning,
Or struggling to trim a hat,
And I must stop my working
To gossip with them and chat.

These hindrances and distractions
Strangely, do not irk.
Such friendly interruptions
Are pleasanter than work!

SIGNIFICANT SAYINGS OF THE DAY

"Too much attention cannot be given to the training of the children in the home. Roughly speaking, children spend one-eighth of their time in school; the other seven-eighths is spent in leisure time. So most of the child's training is received in the home. Children do not like advice. They are more apt to do what they see us do, than what they are told to do."—Willard E. Givens.

"What the morons and near-morons do and say is of little or no significance, but when those in high places make fools of themselves the fact that they do so is in itself news and their foolishness will be published so long as the newspaper continues to fulfill its supreme mission of reflecting society as it is."—Edawrd McKernan.

"It is an obvious fact that it takes two to make a good book—a good author and a good reader. No teacher can teach anything unless someone will learn it. I think that pedagogical ideals rest too much on putting all of the responsibility on the teacher. It is because you encounter that in teaching that I am speaking to you. In both literature and education there is altogether too much of that tacit attitude. It takes two, and it takes an effort. No literature worth while can be appreciated unless someone makes an effort."—Dorothy Canfield Fisher.

"It does not take words, but deeds to build a man's character. In the commercial world we judge men by their deeds. Why should we not do the same in the religious world? The religious world demands the same application and judges from the same appearances as other phases of life."—Rev. J. P. Quinius.

"The trouble with the average reformer is that he has too much faith in the policeman and too little faith in the moral value or moral ideals or the average honesty of the average man."—Gov. Ritchie of Maryland.

MAKING MODERN MENUS

MRS. JONES: "Haven't the berries been lovely this year? I have used them every way imaginable."

Mrs. Brown: "I didn't know there were more than two ways to serve strawberries."

Mrs. Jones: "Oh! yes. I use them in making pies and puddings, and cream puffs, as well as serving them in shortcakes and just plain with cream. The season is all too short!"

STRAWBERRY CREAM PUFFS

Crush berries at least half an hour before using, with enough sugar to sweeten. If puffs are home made fill with cream filling or use small cream puffs from the bakery. Just before serving, surround with the crushed berries.

STRAWBERRY SAUCE

One-third cup butter, one cup powdered sugar, one cup crushed berries. Cream the butter, add the sugar gradually. Beat until light and add the berries.

STRAWBERRY PIE

Roll pastry thin and cover the back of a pie plate. Prick with a fork all over to prevent shrinking. Bake in a hot oven (500 F.) about five minutes until light brown. Fill with berries slightly crushed, with sugar. Garnish with whipped cream and whole berries.

VITILIGO

There are several diseases of the skin which are characterized by atrophy, or deficiency in the coloring or pigment, which is normally one of the constituent elements.

One of these diseases is known as vitiligo, and a person who is a sufferer from it has asked me to give a short description of it.

The disease is usually present in middle life, though it may occur, indeed, it is said it most frequently begins, between the ages of ten and thirty. A bad condition of the skin may, therefore, be regarded as one of its basic features.

The first noticeable evidences of it are small, round spots on the skin. These spots gradually enlarge and lose their irregularity of outline, becoming oval, and then quite irregular as contiguous spots coalesce, or run together.

These patches may enlarge very slowly, though continuously, until the entire surface of the body may be included.

A peculiarity of the disease is that the white patches progress symmetrically over the corresponding areas on the two halves of the body, showing that there is an identity in the anatomical conditions of the skin in this disease, in the two halves of the body, which gives equal opportunities for development in each half of any morbid process.

Another peculiarity is that in the vicinity of each white patch there is an accumulation of brown pigment cells, as if they were being pushed forward and piled up as the white or atrophic patches increase.

This gives the appearance of small islands of brown skin in a large field of white, and is particularly noticeable on the face, hands and feet. Another peculiarity consists in the presence of white hairs, single or in small bunches on one or both sides of the scalp, with or without the white patches upon the skin.

In some of the cases the line of demarcation is not sharp and distinct, while in others the islands, or groups of pigment cells above mentioned, may be wanting.

This peculiar disease is progressive, but after it has reached a certain limit it may stop and remain in this condition the remainder of the patient's life.

It has no perceptible bearing upon the health, those who have it are as well as other people, in other respects.

It is sometimes mistaken for albinism, but that is an entirely different disease and it may also be mistaken for leprosy.

The disease is a permanent one, nothing has as yet been tried which will cure it.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Mrs. J. M. T.: Am 80, not very strong and have just learned that I have a soft fibroid tumor of the womb. After they break and run will they die or dry up in time, or can any relief be obtained except by operation?

Answer.—If there are bleeding and suppuration it means that the tumor should be removed as promptly as possible, and a good surgeon would do it for you, probably in a very short time. If you are suffering in either of the ways mentioned, it seems to me it would be well to take the chance of an operation, even at your age, provided you can get in touch with a really skilled surgeon. I have had experience with a great many fibroid tumors in my life, and never knew of spontaneous recovery if the symptoms mentioned were present. Very rarely they shrink and become harmless as old age comes on, but not with such symptoms as you have mentioned.

Ask Dr. Currier that medical question that has been puzzling you. Confine your letter to fifty words and send stamped, addressed envelope for reply. He cannot, of course, make individual diagnoses, and he reserves the right to decide as to the propriety of queries.

Little Old New York

NEW YORK, June 3.—The night before Lindbergh made his flight to Paris I stood talking with him at Forty-second St. and Broadway. He was looking for a "good movie to take up his attention." He said he was taking off in the morning. We stood there for probably ten minutes, and although his picture had been appearing in the newspapers since his spectacular flight from San Diego to Long Island, none of the thousands who drifted past us on the world's busiest corner, appeared to recognize the rangy young man.

Forty-four hours later, Times square was hysterical with joy at the wonder of his achievement, and the entire world was thrilling to the magic of his name.

Broadway is shocked at the news that Lindbergh's maw has turned down a picture offer of $100,000. The viewpoint of Nedick Highway is voiced by Mile-High-Higgins, who phrases it thus:

"She an' th' kid are foolish. The public has a way of fergettin' an' th' plaything o' today becomes th' annoyance o' tomorrow. George M. Cohan has been out o' th' limelight fer a couple o' years now, an' I'll bet you he could stroll from the Circle to th' Square any sunny matinee day without gettin' a tumble.

"A guy says to me th' other night, 'Who's th' bird that used to sing: "I'm the Man Who Broke th' Bank at Monte Carlo"?' That's all that fame amounts to. Ask any o' th' younger set who supports musical comedy today who Thomas Q. Seabrook was, an' they ain't a one o' them could tell you.

"My advice to Lindbergh an' his maw is, get it while th' goin's good. They ain't no birds in las' year's nest—an' furthermore, they's nothin' as phoney as a cold fried egg on th' kitchen window sill, two hours after breakfast is over."

A Broadway Belle, with the ink still wet on a short-term movie contract, rushed across town to a newspaper office the other afternoon and inserted the following piteous appeal among the classified:

"Obey that impulse and give this little girl a big hand. Leaving for Hollywood at once. Must sacrifice the beautiful furnishings of the little three-room apartment. There is not a scratch on the piano or a chip out of the Chippendales. No reasonable offer refused."

I shoved the advertisement under the retrousse nose of Cynical Sadie and craved comment.

"The same old story," sighed Sadie, thoughtfully massaging her scalp with the far end of her jade cigaret holder. "After three months on the Coast she'll probably be writing another ad. Instead of 'Give this little girl a big hand,' it'll be, 'Give this little girl an active scrubbin' brush'!

I told her I thought she was prejudiced.

"I got to be," said Sadie dipping a corner of her macaroon into the Oolong. "It's the only way I'm able to pay for my hot groceries."

PRISONERS LOSE TO SCOUT SLUGGERS

Boy Scouts slugged their way to a 27 to 24 victory over the federal prisoners confined in the County Jail, in a soft ball game at Cox Memorial Athletic Field Wednesday afternoon, featured by free hitting on both sides.

Gibney and Finlay formed the battery for the Scouts with Smith pitching, and Dyer behind the plate for the prisoners. Sheriff Ohmer Tate officiated as umpire.

LINDBERGH

'Tis but a common monoplane
A boat we call a flivver,
One wing on either side appears,
A cockpit in the middle.
A rag kept out the sleet and hail,
There was a hole to look out yonder.
And in that airship all alone
Performed a miracle, a wonder.
He left his unassuming home
To do what had ne'er been done—
He felt, he knew what was to come
In case his little stunt was won.
But little did he ever think
When he set out to sail,
The friendships of the world would link
Without one dissenting wail.
Just a single mishap to his ship
Sailing through heaven's blue
Would from this lad all honor strip
And the world his life would rue.
But fortune surely spared the brave
And in this instance so true
It saved him from a watery grave
And for other work to do.
Now the world adown the ages bring
And will so long as day returns
A tribute of its love will sing.
To Captain Charles A. Lindbergh.

BOY SCOUT CABIN PARTLY UNDER ROOF

The Boy Scout cabin being erected north of Cox Memorial Athletic Field is now partially under a shingle roof, according to Scoutmaster R. H. Kingsbury, who is making an urgent appeal for volunteer workers to be on hand and complete the roofing work Friday night at 7:30 o'clock.

Members of the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs and parents of Scouts are asked to take particular notice and be available Friday. Volunteers should wear their old clothes and tennis shoes and each bring a hammer, the Scoutmaster says.

CONSTRUCTION OF WILL SOUGHT HERE IN COURT PETITION

Construction of the will of John A. Harner, late of Spring Valley, who passed away October 24, 1926, leaving no widow but three children as heirs, is asked in a suit filed in Common Pleas Court by Margaret Thornhill, as administratrix of the estate, against John H. Harner, Jessie Ann Harner Huff, Margaret Thornhill, Wilbur H. Thornhill, Horace E. Harner, Rosella E. Haines, and Joseph H. Harner, 18, in minor.

The wife of the decedent, Eliza Ellen Harner, preceded her husband in death, and the following children are heirs to the estate, the petition sets forth: Margaret Thornhill, Jessie Ann Huff and John H. Harner.

The administratrix is in doubt as to the true construction of the will and declares that the action is brought to have the court construe the will as to its true meaning and effect, particularly as to items No. 3, 4, 5, and 6. It is claimed that items No. 3, 4, and 5 bequeath an undivided one-third of the estate to each of the three children and the court is asked to determine whether item No. 6 effects or in any way diminishes or reduces the estate created by items 3, 4 and 5.

According to the petition, Wilbur H. Thornhill is the only child of the defendant, Margaret Thornhill; the defendant, Jessie Ann Huff has no children; and the defendants Horace E. Harner, Rosella E. Haines and Joseph H. Harner are children of the defendant, John H. Harner. Attorneys Miller and Finney represent the plaintiff.

TITLE QUIETED

Plaintiff in the suit of J. Oliver Jobe against John Johnson and others in Common Pleas Court has a legal estate and entitled to possession of property described in the petition, against all of the defendants, according to a decision of Common Pleas Court, which provides for quieting of the plaintiff's title to the land and enjoins the defendants from setting up any claims adverse to the title of the plaintiff, or his heirs or assigns.

WINS DIVORCE

Divorce has been obtained by Neoma Beair from Murry Beair in Common Pleas Court on grounds of gross neglect of duty.

DISMISS SUIT

Suit of B. Irma Beach and others, as executors against Perry and Lizzie Darding has been settled and mismissed without prejudice in Common Pleas Court.

Wilcey Moore, at 29, Enters Majors to Find Self a Star

This twenty-nine-year-old, six foot, two hundred pound fellow from Greenville, S. C., is the newest star on big league horizons. Armed with a "heavy" dropping ball he's puzzling batters who face him in the Yankees' box.

By Jack Keene,
International Illustrated News Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK (I.I.N. Special)—Miller Huggins has apparently panned the biggest Nugget of the season from Minors' Creek.

The nugget is Wilcey Moore, who's breaking into the large leagues at the ripe age (for baseball) of twenty-nine. Baseball is that way. The boys come in at between seventeen and twenty. They last for a few days or years, and then go the old route: minors—to farm—to cemetery. Once in a while a fellow keeps going beyond average ten years. Then he becomes a Connie Mack, a John McGraw, or a Miller Huggins, and doesn't have to play. Dazzy Vance broke in at thirty—but then, he was Dazzy Vance.

But Wilcey Moore is Wilcey Moore. He was down in South Atlantic League last year, and he won thirty games.

"Thirty games is thirty games, even in a Y. M. C. A.," roared Huggins. "We must pretend we're Northwest Mounties."

They—the Yankees—got their man. Moore was lassoed a few miles north by east of Greenville, S. C., shipped as baggage to St. Petersburg. Huggins himself broke a bottle of grapefruit juice over his head, launching him as a Yank.

So far this season Huggins has given him frequent practice to show what he can do He went in as relief pitcher three days in succession one week. He allowed one hit in the three days. In his first twenty nine innings in big league company—Moore never faced a big league batter before in his life—he allowed four runs.

Moore's greatest strength lies in a fast ball with a peculiar sudden drop. It's what is known as a "heavy" ball, a ball difficult to knock into the air. This heaviness comes from its peculiar twirl and great speed. During a practice game in the South, Moore pitched four innings without throwing a ball that was hit into the air. Every one of the few hits dribbled along the ground; some stopped dead in the infield.

He'll probably get opportunity to try it often on big leaguers. It appears that Huggins is going to rotate Moore regularly with Pennock, Hoyt, Ruether, and Shocker, or else he'll be used as a reserve to check opposition rallies, one of the most needed forces on any club. Perhaps he'll prove another Marberry.

FLYERS SPARKLE IN OVERWHELMING WIN OVER CEDARVILLE

Pounding out twenty-one hits to score a similar number of runs, the University of Dayton Flyers humbled Cedarville College for the second time this season on the diamond, winning 21 to 5 at Cedarville Thursday afternoon.

It was Dayton's eleventh baseball victory this season. In the previous contest with Cedarville, Dayton was victorious 15 to 5.

The Flyers all fattened their batting averages in compiling the biggest total of runs this season. The winners crossed the plate in every inning but the fifth. McLean and Turner, altenating pitchers for the Yellow-Jackets were entirely ineffective.

Reynolds and Sharpenter divided the mound duty for Dayton.

Sam Hipa was the leading slugger of the afternoon for Dayton, connecting safely five times in six times at bat, including a triple. Lyons, Cedarville third baseman, made three hits and also scored three runs.

Score by innings:

Dayton	2 5 1 5 0 3 1 2 2—21 21 1
Cedarville	0 0 1 0 2 1 0 0 1— 5 9 6

RUPTURE
EXPERT HERE

The Seeley Co's expert, of Chicago, will personally be at the Miami Hotel, and will remain in Dayton Tuesday only, June 7. Mr. Seeley says:

"The Spermatic Shield will not only retain any case of rupture perfectly, but contracts the opening in ten days on the average case. Being a vast advancement over all former methods—exemplifying instantaneous effects immediately appreciable and withstanding any strain or position no matter the size or location. Large or difficult cases, or incisional ruptures (following operations) specially solicited. This instrument received the only award in England and in Spain, producing results without surgery, injections, medical treatments or prescriptions.

Caution—All cases should be cautioned against the use of any elastic or web truss with understraps, as same rest where the lump is and not where the opening is, producing complications necessitating surgical operations. Mr. Seeley has documents from the United States Government, Washington, D. C., for inspection. Our expert will be glad to demonstrate without charge or fit you if desired. HOW MRS. WEAVER WAS HELPED

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

As Mrs. Weaver herself says, "I was never very strong." This is a mild statement describing her condition, for, according to her letters, she was subjected to no small amount of ill health. Fortunately, her sister was familiar with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and begged Mrs. Weaver to try it. "After three or four weeks," writes Mrs. Weaver, "I felt a great difference in myself. I would go to bed and sleep sound, and although I could not do very much work, I seemed stronger. I kept on taking it and now I am well and strong, do my work and take care of three children. I sure do tell my friends about your wonderful medicine, and I will answer any letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Lawrence Weaver, East Smithfield St., Mt. Pleasant, Pa.

If you knew that thousands of women suffering from troubles similar to those you are enduring had improved their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, wouldn't you think it was worth a trial?

MOTHER AND SON, IN TWO CHAPTERS

TABLET PRESENTED TO INSTITUTION AT PROGRAM THURSDAY

Many Visitors Attend Unveiling Rites In Home School

Originators and founders of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home were honored Thursday afternoon when a tablet in their memory was presented to the institution with an elaborate program in the high school auditorium.

Ohio Department, Women's Relief Corps, donated the tablet which contains the names of the Home's founders, and it was unveiled before the audience in the school auditorium with appropriate exercises. The tablet will be mounted later.

Mrs. Mary J. Wilson, Dayton, chairman of the program, presided and her opening address gave a history of the G. A. R. fifty-seven years ago. Col. T. E. Andrews, Home superintendent, gave the address of welcome. The tablet presentation was made by Mrs. Ida J. Whitehorm, Delta, O., president of the Ohio Department, W. R. C., and was accepted by Levy H. Derby, Norwalk, department commander of the G. A. R., who, in turn, presented it to the Home board of trustees. Col. Rell G. Allen, Washington C. H., member of the board, accepted it for the institution.

Two Home pupils, sons of veterans of two different wars, unveiled the tablet. They were Richard Sarves, son of a Civil War veteran and Paul Alexander, son of a Spanish American War veteran. Leverne Crawford, son of a World War veteran, recited a poem during the unveiling exercises.

A number of addresses were heard before the program concluded. Adjutant General Frank B. Henderson, represented Governor Donahey; Mayor John W. Prugh spoke for the citizens of Xenia; Mrs. Edith M. Christy, Oberlin, national president of the W. R. C., represented that organization; Mrs. T. E. Andrews, chief matron of the Home, welcomed the women's organizations; A. W. Hudson, Dayton printer, one of the first children admitted to the Home in 1869, spoke briefly.

Governor Fred C. Runkle, of the National Military Home, Dayton, brought greetings from that institution. Among others on the program were the Rev. Henry J. Becker, Dayton, department chaplain of the G. A. R., who gave the invocation; Anna Loy May, Dayton, who gave "Lest We Forget;" Mrs. R. H. Grube, Xenia, who spoke in memory of her father, Captain William Earnshaw, whose name is on the tablet; Dr. W. A. Galloway, Xenia, who spoke in memory of several others whose names were on the tablet; Lewis R. Cope, Dayton, who represented the designers of the tablet;

Miss Faye Cavanaugh, Xenia, who represented the Daughters of Veterans; Mrs. Helen Brinkle, Dayton, who represented the Spanish American War Auxiliary; Mrs. Middleton, Urbana, representing the American Legion Auxiliary; Otho Noble, Columbus, representing Spanish American War Veterans; Dr. J. King Gibson, Dayton, chaplain of the National Military Home, who pronounced benediction.

General J. Warren Keifer, Springfield, former department commander of the G. A. R., whose name is on the tablet, was not present although he is the only living member of the honored group. During the program the Home Band furnished music and the audience sang "America" and repeated the oath of allegiance to the flag.

SENIORS CLASS PLAY WELL PRESENTED ON SECOND NIGHT HERE

The Thursday night audience of "The Thirteenth Chair," mystery play cleverly presented by the senior class of Central High School, lost none of the effectiveness of the piece, in comparison with Wednesday night, due to the fact that several new characters in the play were equally capable in their parts.

Jean B. Elwell Auditorium was again filled for the second performance. The feminine parts of the play were filled with new actresses Thursday night and the unique arrangement only served to enhance interest in the production. New characters Thursday night, were Thelma Osborne, as the maid; Mildred Fudge, as "Helen O'Neill;" Eleanor McKay as "Mrs. Crosby;" Dorothy Norckauer, as "Mary Eastwood," Evelyn Perrill as "Helen Trent," Louise Miller as "Elizabeth Erskine." Thelma Wagner, as "Grace Standish," and Mary Anna Wolford, as "Madame Rosalie LaGrange."

Male parts in "The Thirteenth Chair" lost none of their acting ability in the second performance and worked well with their new cohorts. In its entirety, "The Thirteenth Chair" was a clever piece, well presented by two capable casts.

CEDARVILLE COLLEGE BOARD ORGANIZES THERE THURSDAY

Dr. J. R. Orr, Pittsburgh, Pa., was re-elected president, Probate Judge S. C. Wright, secretary, and Dr. F. A. Jurkat, treasurer of the board of trustees of Cedarville College at the board's annual meeting in Cedarville Thursday.

The trustees approved an appropriation of $15,000 a year by the state department of education for normal school work at the college.

A tentative arrangement had been made between the board and State Director of Education Vernon Riegal. With the additional income, the college will be able to add four or five new teachers to the payroll in the normal department.

Professor Harley Smith, New Burlington, resigned as a member of the faculty and his place has not been filled.

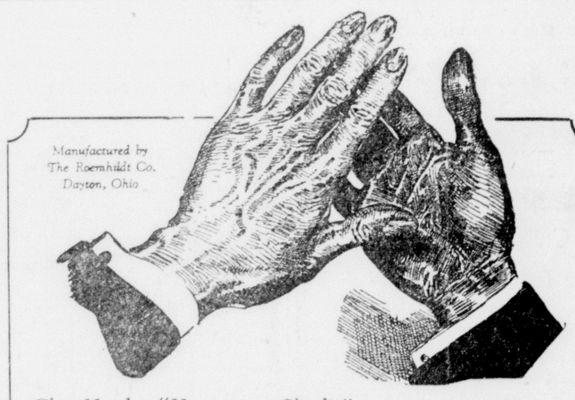

The treasurer reported that the college's endowment fund is now more than $200,000 in comparison with the endowment of $186,000 last year. During the year the institution will also receive a fund of $25,000 bequeathed by Miss Christian Arbuckle, Pittsburgh, Pa.

In addition to approving the degrees and authorizing that they be bestowed on graduates at commencement exercises, the trustees approved the awarding of the degree of bachelor of divinity upon the Rev. Thomas White, pastor of the Third Reformed Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, Pa.; and the degree of doctor of divinity upon the Rev. James L. Chesnut, pastor of the Third Presbyterian Church, Ft. Wayne, Ind., son-in-law of Judge S. C. Wright.

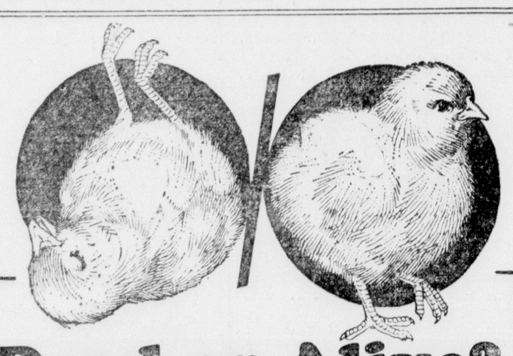

All members of the board were present at the meeting with the exception of William R. Collins, Columbus, and Dr. Homer B. Henderson, Groveport, Pa.

Board members in attendance included Dr. Orr, Dr. Homer MacMillan, Atlanta, Ga.; Dr. David McKinney, Cincinnati; Judge Wright, Xenia; Frank Hastings, Xenia; the Rev. William R. Graham, Lafayette, Ind.; Dr. McChesney, Dr. Jurkat, Dr. M. I. Marsh, George H. Hartman, and Walter C. Iliff, Cedarville.

Practically all the important business was transacted in the afternoon as the morning session was devoted to routine matters.

How Tires Came To Be Invented!

Shorty Interviews The Inventors

Last week I told you folks out front about my discovering that Mr. Carroll and Mr. Binder were the inventors of Automobile Tires. Since that time I have received thousands of letters from all points of this country many of the writers calling me every thing from a liar on down to WORSE than that!

In order to get this question settled I have taken the time from my milking to go over to the Carroll Binder Shop and interview the two partners FULLY on the subject. The following is the interview just as I received it taken down in short-hand.

Q. "Why did you invent automobile Tires?"

A. "Yes and NO! Bunty is a great deal older than that even if he DOES deny it."

Q. "Was it a big burst of thought or did the idea come on gradually like kidney trouble?"

A. "There are three good ways to kill a chicken the first one being to chop off its head. Inasmuch as this makes the chicken quite dead there is no particular use in even SPEAKING of the other five ways! IS there?"

Q. "After inventing Tires what other amusement did you take up?"

A. "I always like mine sunny side up with a very very small ration of bacon and this with a wee piece of well browned toast suffices me until supper. I eat practically nothing at noon."

Q. "Do you feel that posterity should leave you two a couple of seats in the Hall of Fame on account of what you have done with Tires?"

A. "Positively I do NOT believe in the transmigration of souls as applied to cock-roaches, fleas and fish-worms. It is all very clear to me on this point."

Q. "Do you believe that the enormous sale of Tires you now have is in any way induced by the fact that you invented them?"

A. "Some do and some DON'T! I have found this to be the case invariably! Nothing can change me in this respect."

Q. "Why do you carry only the best Tires on the market and why are you able to sell them cheaper and give more service on them than most folks?"

A. "The auto is here to stay in SPITE of what Volstead and Mister Haines says to the contrary! I know this to be true after talking to an old fashioned Horse-Fly—really one of the most discouraged bugs I EVER met!"

Now that I have proven way beyond doubt that Carroll and Binder DID invent Tires I hope I won't need a truck to tote the mail I get from folks who want to make a sucker outta me. I thank you for your attention and hope that this dry spell will let up—if you gather what I mean.

THE CARROLL-BINDER CO

Some novels are talked about because of their vulgarity and people are afraid to read them only because they are afraid to be out of the swim by not doing so. Others are talked about because of their sincerity, art and power.

"Elmer Gantry" is of course the most obvious example of the first sort. "The Old Countess," by Anne Douglass Sedgwick of the second.

Like the so popular "Little French Girl" by the same author this new novel is an interracial drama and shows the same skilled delineation and differentiation of Gallic and Anglo Saxon psychology. Taken all in all this last book is a finer piece of work than any that have preceded it. The author with fewer characters and greater economy of detail, has succeeded in making it more compact and more swift moving in its sweeps toward the inevitable catastrophe. The setting is in perfect tune with the action. Everything is significant. It reminds one of Thomas Hardy's "Return of the Native," in the way in which the characters are borne on ruthlessly on the flood tide of their passions. Just as the river rises and sweeps all before it, so do the passions of the actors rise and sweep against the barriers of conventions, old loyalties and honor.

In the drawing of her characters the American author has shown her usual power. The old countess, malignant, yet pitiful, Marthe, tragic in her loneliness, pouring out the beauty of her soul upon her animals. There is Graham, moody, hard-hearted, devoted to his wife but passionately in love with Marthe, and there is Jill, sane candid loyal who after all is the main stay of Graham's life.

This is no piece of light reading. It is in fact an unsparingly honest, a hopelessly tragic story. But it is not a tragic quality that will make the book unpopular. The reader is pressed against the iron spikes of tragedy but they are not driven in. It is like grave music bright in spots but sweeping steadily to a tragic close. But even the tragedy is beautiful because so inevitable.

DRAMATIC CLUB OF ANTIOCH TO OFFER PROGRAM ON FRIDAY

Three one-act plays are to be presented by the Antioch College Dramatic Club at the Yellow Springs Opera House Friday night. They are entitled, "O'Flaherty, V. C.," a play by Bernard Shaw; "Bad Debts," by Margaret Searle; and Booth Tarkington's popular "Station YYYY."

The club regularly presents three brief plays every month in the school theater, members of the cast reading their parts. Then near the close of the school year, three favorite plays are selected and presented in the regular way, each player committing his lines to memory.

The complete cast of "O'Flaherty, V. C.," follows: "Sir Pierce," Paul Nosker; "O'Flaherty," Avery Leiserson; "Mrs. O'Flaherty," Katherine Fittz; "Tessie," Clarabelle McKnight.

"Bad Debts" has the following cast: "Chester," Richard Potter; "Mrs. Chester," Beatrice Stevens; "Norton," Edwin Loe; "Janet Chester," Dorothy Hilbert;; "Banester," Selby Fiske.

The concluding play has the following cast: "Mr. Winstead," Hamilton Stone; "Mrs. Winstead," Hester Bassett; "Caroline," Rita Fisher; "Anita," Anne Carr; "Herbert," Francis Potter; "Charles," Griscom Morgan; and "Roger," Leland Crossman.

TINGLEY MANAGES CEMETERY COMPANY

Lewis C. Tingley, former executive secretary of the Xenia Chamber of Commerce, is the organizer and general manager of Resthaven Memorial Park and Cemetery, at Louisville, Ky.

Mr. Tingley was president and director of sales for the Memorial Park Cemetery in Dayton before going to Louisville where he has sold approximately $100,000 worth of shares in the similar enterprise. Several Dayton men are interested financially with him in the Louisville project.

Mr. Tingley expects to go into cemetery development in a larger city after leaving Louisville.

BILIOUS? DON'T BE!

Biliousness is a symptom, not a disease. A sour, sick, belching, gassy stomach gets that way because of neglected constipation. Ordinary laxatives don't seem to help much, because the liver, the stomach, the spleen, and the intestines, all have to be aided. Constipation slows up the function of and interferes even with the brain's activity.

Blackburn's Casca-Royal Pills arouse the liver, tone up the stomach and intestines, stimulate the glandular secretions, in a pleasant, perfect way. When the internal organs function regularly, away goes biliousness, sour stomach, and indigestion.

Have you a throbbing at the temples, a bad taste in the mouth, halitosis (unpleasant breath), sour, bilious stomach, dark rings under the eyes and an irritable don't-care languor? Take Blackburn's Casca-Royal Pills. Wake up your ambition and energy and feel good every day. In less than a dozen hours you will be on the "Wellville" road. Forty-five pills—30 cts—at all drugstores.

CHEERING CROWDS AND WAVING FLAGS

RULE CLARIFIES HOME MANAGEMENT

Under a law enacted by the Ohio legislature several weeks ago, complete control and supervision of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home in Xenia is given to the board of trustees, Attorney General Edward C. Turner ruled Thursday. The superintendent is henceforth to be "the agent or active arm to carry out the board's mandates."

PLAN TO ORGANIZE S. S. COUNCIL HERE

For the purpose of re-organizing a City Council of Religious Education, a union meeting of the Sunday Schools of the city will be held at the Second U. P. Church, Sunday, June 5, at 2 p. m.

An interesting program has been arranged, including music, round-table discussion and an address. A large delegation from each Bible School is desired. The public is invited.

The county convention will be held at Spring Valley, Thursday, June, 9, at the Friends Church. The program will be announced later.

BEDS, TABLES, BUREAUS, SIDEBOARDS, CHAIRS, SEWING MACHINE, COMPUTING SCALES, FARM WAGON, REFRIGERATOR. SATURDAY AFTERNOONS ONLY.

The Rates are lowered

but the standards are high as ever

Some people judge everything by price. They think anything very expensive must be very good.

Most people don't.

I see that proved by public appreciation of our recently lowered rates.

We're trying to make the Winton the best hotel "value" ever offered the public—and the public likes it.

Winton service and comfort couldn't be better at double the price. The beds couldn't be softer, the linen cleaner, the rooms airier, the staff politer if you paid us twice as much.

The steward who buys the food is as particular as your wife. The chef is as fussy in his kitchen as your wife is in hers. The waiters are swift, silent, and they never bring a medium steak when you've said rare.

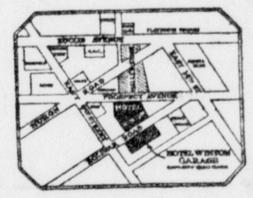

The Winton is a good place to stop . . . good to you and good for your checkbook. Will you be my guest?

WILE SAYS:

members were deeply impressed with Mr. Coolidge's sympathetic grasp of the southland's plight. Representative Kemp told the president that the rehabilitation of 600,000 people presents problems of such proportions that only congress could be expected to solve them.

* * *

The waters already are receding in a large part of the valley. Before many weeks the time will have come when all of the 600,000 will be able to return to their homes. It is then, Mr. Kemp contends, that the most difficult phases of the situation must be met. Unless some means can be devised which will enable these people to get into production, the consequences will be nation-wide. The Louisianian's plan is to have party leaders agree on a rehabilitation policy and commit themselves to limit the duration of the special session to one week, or ten days at the most. The session would be for the sole purpose of helping the people to get on their feet economically and would not consider flood control legislation in any form. Representative Kemp urged the president to call congress as esoon as the foregoing assurances had been obtained.

One of the novel features of the idea of a strictly "flood session" of congress is that senators-elect William S. Vare, of Pennsylvania, and Frank L. Smith, of Illinois, should be invited to stay at home. They are, of course, entitled to seek admission to the senate of the next session of congress, but it is recognized on all hands that if they did so at a special session, a controversy would immediately be provoked, and all other business indefinitely held up. One of the administration's objections to a special session before next winter is understood to be the fear that Vare-Smith affair might frustrate the principal object of calling house and senate to Washington.

Representative Kemp, on the other hand, placed much emphasis, in his conversation with President Coolidge, upon the necessity of securing rehabilitation legislation while the country's attention is focused on the disaster. The congressman holds that it might be fatal to delay and thus dull the interests of the nation in seeing that full justice is done. Representatives Riley J. Wilson and Whitmell P. Martin, Democrats, of Louisiana, joined in the demand for a special session.

It is their opinion that congress should authorize an appropriation of $500,000,000, to be expended at the rate of $50,000,000 annually, for reconstruction of levees, highways and such other work as may be found feasible in connection with a new program of flood prevention. Messrs. Wilson and Martin think that the crying need is liberalization of the farm loan act, or the setting up of special credit machinery for the benefit of persons who have lost their all and are in no position to obtain credit through existing channels.

* * *

Representatives Wilson and Martin favor an extra session not limited in its duration, but which would merely give precedence to flood legislation.

ACE REACHES PARIS FIELD AFTER DELAY OCCASIONED BY FOG

such that the French hold him equal to any military ace.

In the meantime Lindbergh's borrowed plane was being rolled into a military hangar which was immediately locked up so souvenir hunters could not get at it and damage it.

The American airman entered the hangar and it was there that the formal greetings took place.

The party that welcomed the young flyer was composed of Parmely Herrick, son of Myron T. Herrick, American ambassador to France; F. B. Mahoney, president of the Ryan Airlines, builders of "The Spirit of St. Louis"; a few attaches of the American embassy and some French officials.

An imperial airways plane—a passenger carrying machine—from Croydon, just outside of London, landed at Le Bourget five minutes after Lindbergh.

One of the passengers, M. Ehrlich, told an interesting story about the flight.

"We followed Lindbergh from Lympne," said M. Ehrlich, "and we were certainly thrilled and entertained by what we saw. When he got out over the English channel he began to do "stunts" for his own amusement. He looped the loop and went through other evolutions whose names I do not know. But once on the French side of the channel Lindbergh made a straight line for Paris and flew at high speed without any more evolutions."

M. Ehrlich said that fog was encountered all the way from England to the French flying field. He said that from Lympne to Le Bourget Lindbergh flew at an average altitude of 3,000 feet.

Elaborate police precautions had been taken to handle a great crowd of men and women but they were not needed. In addition to newspaper reporters and photographers there were only a score or two of civilians, but they made up in enthusiasm what they lacked in numbers.

Lindbergh's baggage, including a hat box and a package, was placed in the American embassy Rolls Royce and at 10:20 the car departed for Paris bearing Lindbergh, Herrick and Capt. White of the embassy staff. Mahoney followed in another car.

Lindbergh remained secluded in the embassy during the morning but he went to luncheon in the Bois De Bologne headquarters of the International League of Aviators and again it was demonstrated that the French have not had enough of this young hero for hundreds lined the Bois to cheer him.

At the International League of Aviators luncheon on behalf of the league Lindbergh presented the Japanese aviator Abe, through the Japanese embassy, with a trophy for his flight from Tokyo to Paris. He also presented the league's medal to Captain Pelletier De Oisy for the most notable French aviation achievement in 1926, his long flight to the east.

FUN FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

The Rovin' Ritzies
By Flo Frederick

How Patsy decorates a pin
So the kids can badges win.

Everybody was playing marbles. Even the girl members of the Ritzie club had taken an interest in the game. Patsy often kept score while Marty, the twins, and several of the neighbor boys held a play tournament. Betty had made marble bags for each of her fellow Ritzies and had frankly admitted that she would like to learn the game "just to be able to own the bright, colored marbles."

"Let's hold a regular marble tournament," suggested Tag to the other Ritzies, who were sitting in their "comfy" canvas chairs in the carpenter shop.

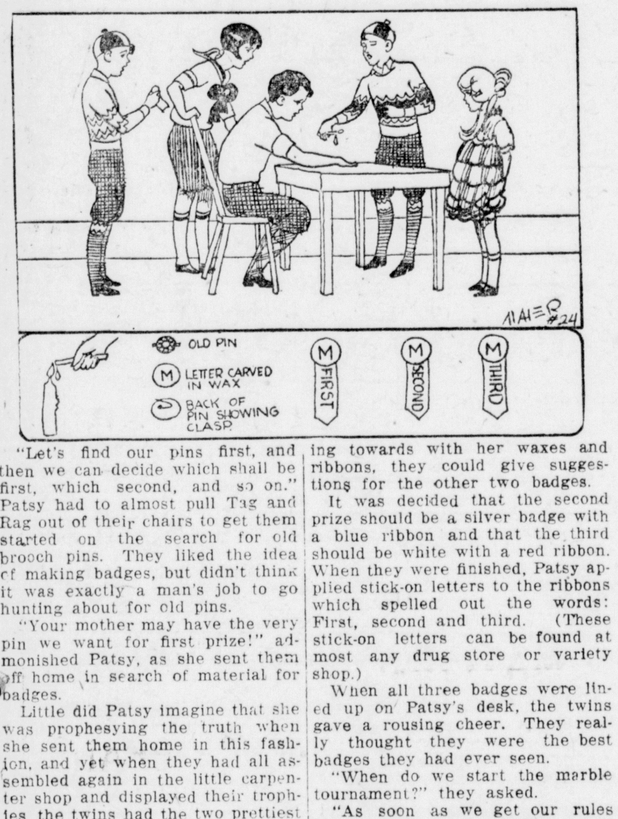

"It wouldn't be any fun unless we could give badges to the winners and they cost a lot of money," objected Marty.

"Why not make the badges?" suggested Patsy.

The boys would have scoffed at the idea if Patsy hadn't already shown her skill at making things too often to be ridiculed without being given a try.

"If we can find some old pins, the kind that mother calls a 'brooch,' I can doctor them up with sealing wax and make them look like regular badges. How many do you need?"

"If we play off a regular tournament, there can only be one real winner, but I think we should award a second and third prize to the last two eliminated," said Marty.

"Let's find our pins first, and then we can decide which shall be first, which second, and so on." Patsy had to almost pull Tag and Rag out of their chairs to get them started on the search for old brooch pins. They liked the idea of making badges, but didn't think it was exactly a man's job to go hunting about for old pins.

"Your mother may have the very pin we want for first prize!" admonished Patsy, as she sent them off home in search of material for badges.

Little did Patsy imagine that she was prophesying the truth when she sent them home in this fashion, and yet when they had all assembled again in the little carpenter shop and displayed their trophies, the twins had the two prettiest pins in the lot. This seemed quite funny to the Ritzies, but they didn't realize that had the two pretty old pins been laying about Patsy's or Betty's house, they would have claimed them long before for their dolls.

Patsy had brought some sticks of sealing wax from the house, a piece of an old candle, and Marty's letter sealing monogram which stamped the initial M on the tips of envelopes. He had been given this last year for Christmas, along with a box of letter paper.

The Ritzies were wondering what this collection of old materials had to do with the making of marble badges and they gathered around Patsy's desk to see what she would do with them.

Choosing the biggest pin for the foundation of the first badge, she melted the stick of gold-colored sealing wax over the lighted candle, allowing the wax to drop on the face of the pin. She pressed this down in a regular pattern with a stick of wood and before the wax had time to harden, stamped Marty's monogram on the center, which left a big M on the top of the pin.

"The M stands for Marbles," she explained, as she searched through her box of doll ribbons and finally selected a black, grosgrained ribbon about an inch and a quarter wide. She turned back the two corners at the one end and tacked them down with black thread. This left the ribbon pointed at one end and she cut it off at the other so that it was just four inches long. Fastening the straight end to the cross-pin at the back of the brooch, she held up her finished work.

"Why, it does look like a badge," exclaimed Tag. "Just like the ones they gave over at Center playground last year for swimming."

Now that the boys and Betty knew just what Patsy was working towards with her waxes and ribbons, they could give suggestions for the other two badges.

It was decided that the second prize should be a silver badge with a blue ribbon and that the third should be white with a red ribbon. When they were finished, Patsy applied stick-on letters to the ribbons which spelled out the words: First, second and third. (These stick-on letters can be found at most any drug store or variety shop.)

When all three badges were lined up on Patsy's desk, the twins gave a rousing cheer. They really thought they were the best badges they had ever seen.

"When do we start the marble tournament?" they asked.

"As soon as we get our rules worked out," answered Marty, and they all got busy with pencil and paper.

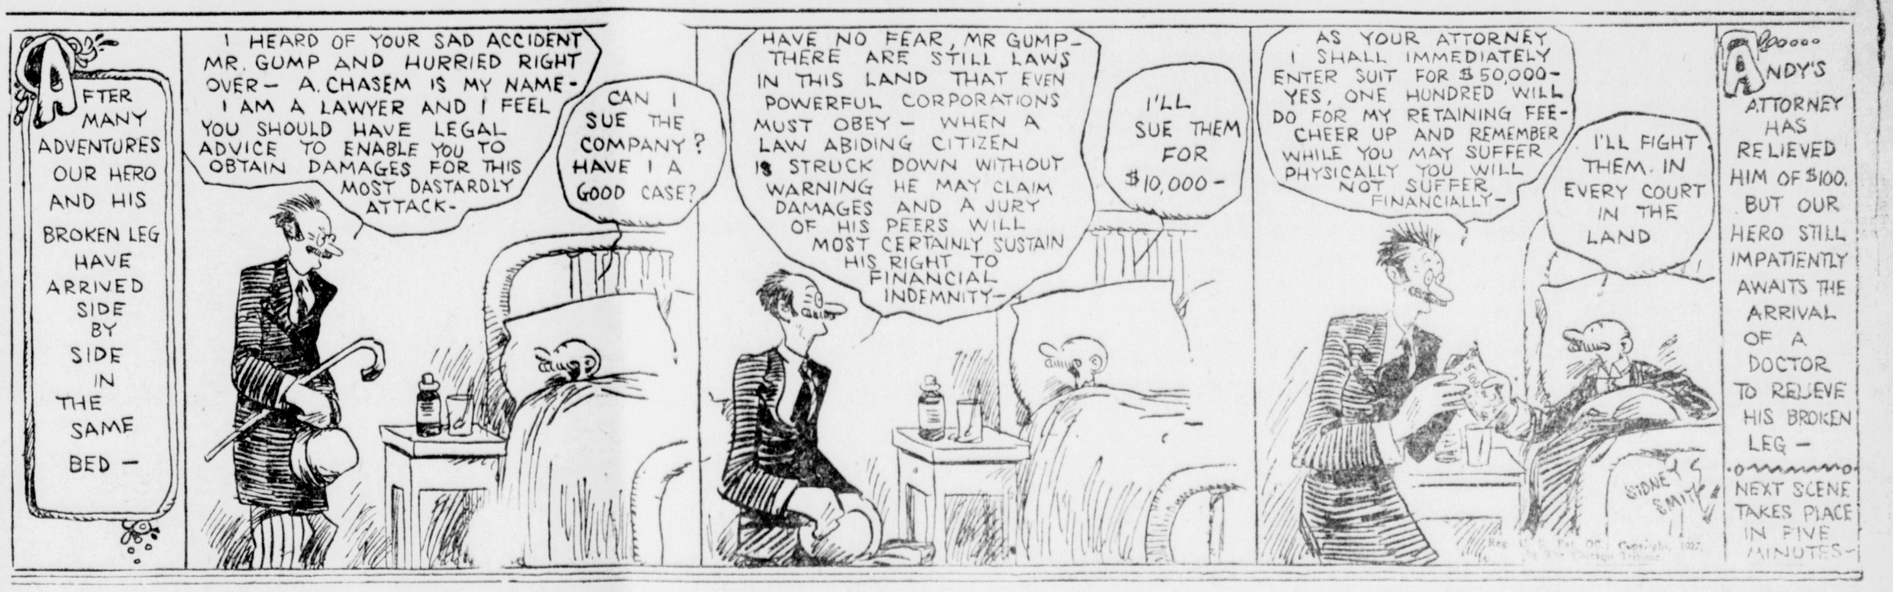

* * *

If you are planning a marble tournament or races for a picnic, Ritzie badges would make the contest seem worthwhile. You will be sure to find some big, old brooch pins around the house, and with these as a foundation the rest will be easy, if you follow Patsy's directions.

The Theatre

By FLEET SMITH

NEW YORK, June 3.—Out in Billings, Montana, a few years ago a young man is said to have done a parachute jump from a plane for $15. There is no reason for qualifying the statement, except that there is still doubt as to whether he actually collected the $15. As this is being written theatrical managers, film producers and divers and sundry promoters have bid up to and exceeding a million dollars for this young man's services. Never has there been such a sudden and popular burst of fame as is now being experienced by this courageous youth. It is not his fame alone that has brought the managers to him with their offers of gold. They recognize that Captain Lindbergh is unwittingly the greatest showman ever known to showmen.

Most of the offers made to Lindbergh as reported in press dispatches, according to reliable New York amusement publication, have been genuine, although the shoestring opportunists no doubt also have flattered the young hero. Adolph Zukor, a recognized leader in the film industry is reported to have called personally on the flier in Paris with an offer of a $300,000 contract. Roxy, famous New York showman, is known to have offered a $25,000 a week for two weeks' appearance at the Roxy Theatre, New York. The Paramount Theatre in New York which has just signed an agreement to pay Paul Whiteman $10,500 a week for the services of himself and orchestra over the period of a year, is a contender for Lindbergh and in the show-down is expected to get him.

As a financial genius, Captain Lindbergh is a tower of strength. Here is a boy who was willing to risk his savings, $2000, plus courage and his life, in an enterprise that seemed dubious. Even the young bankers in St. Louis who finally pooled together enough money to finance his excursion considered the investment a bad risk. But the young man who made a scant living by risking his neck was willing to stake all his resources on the venture and how could his prospective backers, whose feet were literally on the ground, refuse to take a chance with him?

Robert McLaughlin had the big idea not long ago of starring Glenn Hunter next season in "Hamlet," according to Burton Rascoe, New York writer. Hunter was to be billed as "the youngest Hamlet." Hunter at first refused to consider the project; he was frightened at the notion of being compared with John Barrymore.

Later on, however, Hunter emerged from a long study of the Shakespearean play with a new hunch about the proper interpretation of the role. He had discovered from the text that Hamlet did not care for men, nor very much for women, either. He must, then, concluded Hunter, have had affection for a dog.

Hunter made some researches and discovered that Great Danes were very popular in England at about the time Hamlet was first played in the Globe Theater. His idea was that the famous soliloquy was addressed to a dog, a Great Dane. He planned, then, to introduce an innovation into the tradition of the play. He would have a Great Dane lie at his feet while he stroked the dog's head and completed the soliloquy.

Some friends pointed out that dramatic critics would wise-crack about the "melancholy Great Dane" and this has worried Hunter; but the next season will probably see a "Hamlet" as Hunter conceives it—that is, with a Great Dane in it.

WINCHESTER, Va., June 3.—In her home here, Mrs. Richard Evelyn Byrd is awaiting tranquilly the moment when her son, the intrepid North Pole flyer, will start his flight to Paris, which she intends to witness. Confident that her boy will succeed in his perilous quest, she plans to go to New York as soon as Commander Byrd advises her of the time of his take-off, to wish him Godspeed on his transatlantic journey.

The aged woman, mother of three distinguished sons, has complete confidence that her boy, who braved the Arctic wastes successfully in his flight across the North Pole last year, will be equally triumphant in his attempt to join New York to the French capital over the air route.

Commander Byrd, who is in daily communication with his mother over the long-distance telephone, has assured her that he will not leave without giving her the date and time of the hop-off, in order that she may go to New York to watch him start.

Mrs. Byrd has two sons besides the famous aviator. One is Harry Flood Byrd, governor of Virginia, the other Thomas B. Byrd, of Winchester. Both of them will accompany their mother to New York for Commander Byrd's start.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED—

The entrance of America into the World War, finds Phillip Wynne Tracy IV suffering from the collapse of his first passionate love affair. Before this, he and Natlee Jones, who was the daughter of the Tracys' milkman, had had a childish engagement which was objected to by both Mrs. Tracy and Mr. Jones.

Phillip becomes interested in Lyra Hilliard, an old friend of his mother's.

The whole affair, however, sinks into nothingness because war is declared.

Rod and Phil are the first to enlist. Natlee goes to the depot to see them off and in her anxiety to see Phil she ignores Rod entirely. This nearly breaks his heart.

Phillip finds he must leave for the southern training camp before seeing his mother again. Here he has a most unusual experience with a nameless girl. He gets detailed to kitchen police and his passes revoked.

On an impulse of pity, Phil proposes marriage to the nameless girl. Here the story further unfolds—

CHAPTER XXXII

PHIL BIDS GOOD-BYE TO GLADYS

ALL the next day Phil was as nervous as a cat.

It seemed to him as though he had never seen so many telegrams delivered to other men in the outfit since he had been at Fort Bliss. Marta and her mother came up for parade, but Lieutenant Andrews arranged matters in such a way that he did not get a chance to speak to them.

Marta, however, managed to convey to him that the lieutenant was not making a hit with her, even while he was escorting them to their car.

It was then that Phil received two telegrams and smiled for the first time that day. He realized that Andrews was doing him a favor by taking Marta and her mother away just at that moment. It was not punishment to give him a chance to read his anxiously awaited messages from his mother.

One, of course, was the request that he call at the office and receive a sum of money from some one that he should name. The other was a day letter which almost made him decide not to call for it. His mother had wired:

"What is the matter, son? Are you in great trouble? I cannot understand why you should want such a large sum of money as your allowance has been sent you every week. I requested the Trust Company to send it weekly instead of monthly, the day after you went away. Do you want me to come down? I am greatly worried. I have also wired Rod asking him if you were all right. At first I had determined to get on the train and go to you, but Major Aukland said he thought it would be much better to let you work it out for yourself. He advised me to send you the money and say nothing, but I cannot refrain from telling you that if you need me I will start on the next train. Your loving and much worried Mother."

The moment he read this wire, he hurried out to find Rod.

"I was hunting for you, Wynne," he said. "I have just had a wire from your mother. She seems to have gotten into her head that you are in trouble. What have you been doing, writing for money?"

"I wired yesterday evening for $1,000."

Rod gave a prolonged whistle. "Been gambling?"

"Yes."

"That is a pretty big sum, Wynne, even for you to lose."

"Oh, hell! Stop your preaching, Rod. Neither you nor mother seem to realize that it really is my own money. Besides, I am not sure that I have lost it."

Rod looked mystified, but as usual after the one outburst he said nothing more except to volunteer to identify him.

"I think the telegram I received from Mother this morning will do that," returned Phil, loftily.

"They say that all the red-light district is to be broken up tonight," continued Rod. "I expect every tough guy in the regiment will be there to see the fun. For my part, I think it will be rather a good place to stay away from."

Phil knew exactly what Rod meant by this speech, but he made no comment except, "I feel rather sorry for those poor women."

Rod gave him a searching glance under which Phil felt himself color as he turned away with the information that he was going down to get his money.

Rod acted as though he wanted to say something more, but Phil hurried out of hearing.

"But—I cannot take your money," she said again, rather wildly.

When he had received the money in ten $100 bills, he did feel a little nervous for himself and for Gladys.

HE wanted to get it to her as soon as possible and close the incident, but he was afraid for her after she had gotten it in her possession.

He was glad there happened to be no one in the telegraph office at that time.

When he arrived at the "narrow street" he knew the reason why.

It looked as though every man in and out of the army was in that drunken, jostling, swearing crowd.

When he had succeeded in reaching the place that he knew had belonged to Gladys, he found the door shut and the curtain down.

Contemptuously he was turning away when the door was opened just enough for a hand to be thrust out and grasp his sleeve.

"Come in," said Gladys, in a low voice.

She fairly pulled him in and quickly slammed and locked the door.

"I was running no chance of missing you," she said. "It is a terrible lot of animals that are growling out there. Sometimes I thought they would break in the door."

Phil looked at her. She had clothed herself in a street dress of dark blue. Her hat and coat lay across the bed while on the floor beside it was a pitifully small bag.

"Do you think it will be safe for you to go away tonight?" he asked.

"Not very," she answered. "I would have gone this afternoon, but—but—you said you were coming."

"I'm sorry, Gladys, that I have kept you, but I could not get here before. I did not get the wire until about two hours ago."

She looked her question, but did not speak.

Phil unbuttoned a pocket in his tunic, took out the bills and thrust them into her hand.

She drew away so quickly that they fell to the floor, and she could see that they were all yellow backs.

"You should not have come into the street tonight with all that money, Wynne, your life would have been in great danger if it had become known that you had it."

"I expect so, Gladys. How can you hide it so that you will be safe with it? You see, I did not know how to get it to you any other way. I knew you could not use a check."

The girl slowly bent down, and picked up the money. Rising, she held it out to Phillip.

He held his hands to his sides and shook his head.

"You must take it, Wynne. Don't you see I cannot keep it?"

Again he shook his head.

"But—but I cannot take your money," she said again, rather wildly.

"Have you enough of your own to take you somewhere—where you can at least rest for a while?"

"I have just $50. I have not been able to earn much lately, but I have saved all the money you left the two times you have been here."

"Well, that roll of bills is what I'm going to leave on my third and last visit."

The girl looked at him dumbly.

"Take it, Gladys. It really means nothing to me. I want you to have it for two reasons—first, because you need it probably more than I shall ever need money, and secondly, because you have shown me that there are sincere, honest women in the world."

"HONEST—me?" faltered Gladys.

"Sure. You have been honest with me as a man is honest. A man does not need to be continent to be honest, but he must not lie or steal. My dear, I think you have all the virtues but one.

"When I am gone, you had better keep your door locked until tomorrow morning, and then get out of town as soon as possible."

"Wynne, I will take this money, for as you said last night, 'it is a way out,' and if you ever think of me after tonight, will you remember that I am proud of what you just said to me?"

"Some day you will know that men and women are all alike—good, bad and indifferent. The things that make men honest are the things that make women virtuous, for virtue does not mean one thing in a man and another thing in a woman. Very soon the world is going to acknowledge that. Will you remember that you first heard it from a woman like me?"

She thrust the money into her bosom and made as if to hold out her hand. Phillip started to grasp it, but instead of letting him clasp hers, she quickly unlocked the door and took hold of his arm and thrust him forth.

He heard the lock click. Then he walked swiftly down the street.

After he left Gladys' doorway, he walked quickly to the telegraph office and wired a night letter to his mother.

"Thanks for sending me the money. I know that my income must have accumulated all these years to such an extent that a check for a thousand would not mean anything, but it was nice of you to have made it so easy for me to get it promptly.

"I am not in any trouble and am feeling splendidly. Have met your friend, Mrs. Tennis, and her daughter. She—the daughter and not the mother—is a very pretty girl and she is making my stay at Fort Bliss quite pleasant.

"Dear Mother, will you not come to the realization that I am grown up? Surely if I am old enough to fight for my country, I am old enough to decide my way of living for myself.

"You are very far away from Fort Bliss and, if you will forgive me, I think you are still further away from my newly discovered self.

"Some day when I become better acquainted with this son of yours than I am now, I will introduce him to you—not as you have idealized him, but as he really is.

"Phillip Wynne Tracy IV."

Three days later when Phillip strolled back toward the "narrow street" he found the "high walls pierced by a window and a door—a window and a door" razed to the ground and not a woman to be seen.

Phil has been saved from cynicism by a nameless girl. In the next chapter he finds Natlee is still a factor.

LINDBERGH FLIES BACK TO FRANCE

LINDBERGH COMING TO DAYTON

DAYTON, O., June 3.—Captain Charles Lindbergh who hopped from New York to Paris and international fame will visit this city to meet Orville Wright whose first flight Dec. 17, 1903 at Kitty Hawk, N. C., consumed just fifty-nine seconds.

Lindbergh, it was announced by Chamber of Commerce officials today, will visit Dayton after paying his respects to Washington, D. C., New York, St. Louis and Detroit.

Committees were busy being named today with the purpose of making the new hero's visit as great an event as was the homecoming of Orville and the late Wilbur Wright nearly a quarter century ago.

WILE SAYS:

Flood Relief Congress May Act What About Vare? Washington Notes

By FREDERIC WILLIAM WILE
Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright 1927

WASHINGTON, June 3.—President Coolidge has just had submitted to him an entirely new plan for a special session of congress to deal with the Mississippi flood. The plan contemplates a "limited" session to last not longer than ten days and to be confined strictly to relief and rehabilitation measures. The suggestion originates with members of the Louisiana delegation, who have formally laid it before the White House. Representative Bolivar E. Kemp, Democrat, of the sixth district, has worked out the most specific proposal and was given opportunity to elucidate it in detail at the president's desk.

A basic feature of Representative Kemp's proposal is that leaders of both parties should agree in advance to ban politics at the "flood session" and devote it exclusively to the business for which house and senate were specially convened. There would, in particular, according to the Kemp scheme, be no effort to organize either house of the seventieth congress. In the lower branch a speaker pro-tem would be appointed, while no committee in either house would be needed, as flood legislation would be brought directly to the floor in each body.

* * *

The Louisiana delegation, which conferred with the president, did not come away with any assurance of his interes in its proposals though

KENTUCKY'S FLOOD DEATH TOLL STANDS AT FORTY-SIX NOW

Refugees Tell Story Of Cloudburst—Relief Started

LEXINGTON, Ky., June 3.—Kentucky's flood death toll reached forty-six when Morgan and Elliott County refugees made their first appearance here, bringing tales of twelve known deaths and unconfirmed reports of at least ten more, as a result of Sunday's cloudburst which wrecked several hundred homes and made at least 20,000 miners jobless. A conservative estimate of mine property, farms and utilities places the property ty loss at $2,000,000.

At Frankfort, Gov. Fields today authorized the use of $2,000 for a preliminary emergency fund and detailed Dr. P. E. Clarkerby, assistant state health officer and Engineer H. S. Jacobson to the storm swept area.

Newspapers here at Frankfort, Louisville and the larger cities of the state have begun a flood relief campaign to assist the homeless and jobless.

The other counties where deaths were reported are Letcher, Floyd, Johnson, Harlan and Perry Counties. The latter counties were swept by feeder waters of the Big Sandy. Morgan County was swept by the Licking River and Elliott County by the source waters of the Little Sandy.

MANDELL MAY NOT BE HELD IN DEATH

KANSAS CITY, Kan., June 3.—An investigation into the circumstances surrounding the death of Steve Adams, Chicago boxer, in his fight Wednesday night with Sammy Mandell, lightweight champion, today had revealed no grounds on which Mandell could be prosecuted, according to A. J. Melliott, county attorney here.

Mandell, who left last night for Chicago in company with his manager and an attorney, is prepared to return at the instance of authorities here.

A coroner's inquest will be held today or tomorrow to determine the exact cause of Adams' death.

CHAMBERLIN PLANS HOP BY AIR TO BERLIN

Believe Bellanca Will Leave For Europe Friday

MINEOLA, N. Y., June 3.—The Bellanca monoplane, Columbia, piloted by Clarence D. Chamberlin, will hop off from here to some point in Europe, probably Berlin, late this afternoon or tonight, according to plans announced today.

Chamberlin will be accompanied by a navigator whose name was not revealed. The navigator is said to be a former navy aviator.

Charles A. Levine, president of the Columbia Aircraft Corporation which is backing the flight, today was in telephonic communication with the office of the National Aeronautical Association in Washington. Levine asked that officials be sent to Curtis field to make an official record of the take-off.

Carl F. Schory, chairman of the contest committee of the association, was expected to leave Washington immediately for the Long Island field.

AUTHORITIES FAIL TO LOCATE MISSING ANTIOCH STUDENT

Place No Credence In Suicide Theory—Search Continues

Information has been received by Antioch College officials that George Frederick Adshead, 22, missing student, purchased a ticket for Dayton and boarded a Dayton and Xenia Railway Co. traction car last Friday. It is not known at what hour he went to Dayton but the information constitutes the first clew obtained in the quiet inquiry being conducted by college officals and authorities.

Little progress is being made in the quiet search being conducted for George Frederick Adshead, 22, Antioch College special student, who disappeared Friday leaving a note indicating he would not return.

College officials scout the suicide theory but, nevertheless, a thorough search was made of hills and ravines in the vicinity without avail.

Ill health and a tendency toward despondency because of his physical condition is set up as the probable motive behind the disappearance, which did not come as a great surprise to members of the faculty, in as much as Adshead had often talked of going away and "starting life anew."

School friends express the opinion the student vanished because he was tired of college and its environment, rather than from any desire to end his life.

At the time of his disappearance, he wore a white sweater and gray trousers, the sweater having a band of black and yellow at the bottom. Adshead is five feet, seven inches tall, weighs about 130 pounds and has blond hair.

"Yes, I personally saw him, and I also saw young girls with him in the diamond house during that time," the witness said.

Wife Loved Two Says Chaplin

COUNTER CHARGES SAY LITA ATTENDED DRINKING PARTIES

Action Will Bring Case To Speedy Trial, Is Said

LOS ANGELES, June 3.—Counter-charges by Charlie Chaplin that his young wife had love affairs with two men for whom, he said, she neglected her home and babies to attend gay drinking parties, today prompted attorneys for Lita Grey Chaplin to move for a speedy trial of her divorce suit against the film comedian.

With the possibility of a settlement of the Chaplin's marital difficulties out of court apparently blocked by the comedian's cross-suit for divorce, Mrs. Chaplin's counsel indicated her answer would be filed next week, thus paving the way for the trial within thirty days, the earliest prescribed by law.

Meanwhile, the actor's lawyers here were scrutinizing Mrs. Chaplin's deposition, just completed, which is expected to be used as an additional legal weapon for the comedian in the impending court fight.

Chaplin's suit, filed in superior court here, was in the form of a cross-complaint; accompanied by an answer to his wife's divorce action in which he denied her charges of cruelty.

The two men with whom Chaplin alleges his wife associated were not named in the complaint. They were referred to as "a certain young man" and as an "automobile salesman," whom Chaplin "disliked" and of whom he "entirely disapproved."

The comedian charged Mrs. Chaplin was "infatuated" with "a certain young man" and continued to associate with him despite her husband's remonstrances, meeting him secretly and inviting him to her home while Chaplin was at work.

His wife confided to friends, Chaplin asserted, that she was "crazy about" an "automobile salesman," with whom she was "being seen in public places, dancing at all hours of the night and drinking liquor."

Chaplin further charged that his wife "habitually occupied her time dancing in hotels, cafes and beach resorts in and near Los Angeles," thereby "absenting herself from her home to the grievious neglect of her two children." On numerous occasions, the comedian accused, his wife did not return home until two and three o'clock in the morning and often she was accompanied by the anonymous automobile man. Frequently she invited him to the Chaplin home and entertained him and others "at which times liquor was drunk to excess."

When he remonstrated, Chaplin stated, his wife became angered and replied that she did not intend to change her mode of life to please him and suggested that he arrange for a divorce.

At the same time, Chaplin said, his wife asked him "coldly what financial arrangements" he would make with her in the event of a divorce. He assured her, he said, that he would give her all that she was entitled to under the law, without litigation. In this connection, Chaplin estimated his fortune at $1,250,000, of which he claimed only $266,932.63 was community property.

Complaining that the Chaplin home was "big and gloomy" and that the "atmosphere" was making her "nervous," Mrs. Chaplin, according to the actor's suit, "increased her indulgence in vain and frivolous pleasures, drank liquor to excess and while under the influence of liquor conducted herself in an unwomanly and undignified manner."

The comedian also charged his wife with "ruinous extravagance" and said she spent $10,000 on her recent voyage to Honolulu.

Chaplin alleged his wife's divorce suit had stigmatized their elder son, Charles Spencer, Jr., who now is 22 months of age. The other Chaplin child, Sidney Earle, is thirteen months old. Chaplin seeks the custody of both.

FLOOD MEETING MAY SPLIT

WASHINGTON EXCITEDLY PREPARES TO GIVE LINDBERGH ROYAL WELCOME

WASHINGTON, June 3.—A fever of excitement gripped the national capital today as officials and citizens began to count the hours until an American youth steps into a limelight usually reserved for presidents, kings and queens.

Capt. Charles Lindbergh, master of the Atlantic, will be accorded not only the highest honors of potentates but will be paid the enthusiastic homage of a half million plain Americans in a wild jubilee.

While Capt. Lindbergh is coming to Washington to meet the president of the United States, his first great thrill will be a mother's If Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, who is deserting her schoolroom in Detroit to meet her famous son, wills, she will be the first to greet him as he steps from the cruiser Memphis here.

The task of sheltering Mrs. Lindbergh from curious crowds will fall to Mrs. Coolidge, whose guest she will be at the temporary White House. Mrs. Lindbergh, it was said, may either board the Memphis down the river, greet her son at the presidential dock in the Washington navy yard or join the President and Mrs. Coolidge at Washington monument where Capt. Lindbergh and the President will meet.

Cognizant of criticism which the transfer of Capt. Lindbergh's reception from New York to Washington has evoked in some quarters, the cabinet and citizens committees have doubled their efforts to make the welcome the greatest in Washington's history.

The Memphis sailed for Cherbourg at 1:30 and Captain Lindbergh will go aboard there tomorrow.

Vice-Admiral Burrage stated that he expects the Memphis to arrive in Washington at 11 a. m., June 11.

CEDARVILLE KEEPS M'CHESNEY; TURNS DOWN OTHER OFFERS

College Trustees Vote Increase — President Twelve Years

Dr. W. R. McChesney, president of Cedarville College twelve years, informed trustees of his decision to remain with the institution "indefinitely," at the annual board meeting Thursday afternoon.

Trustees received President McChesney's decision with much satisfaction and voluntarily voted to increase his annual salary to $3,500 per year, an increase of $1,000, in recognition of this thirty-three years of service for the college and the progress made during this period.

Dr. McChesney declined offers to accept the chair of systematic theology at Lane Seminary, Cincinnati, and to become dean of Muskingum College, New Concord, O., in deciding to remain at Cedarville. During his educational career he has received a total of nine offers to become identified with larger institutions but declined them all.

Dr. McChesney came to Cedarville thirty-three years ago in July when the institution was being founded and prior to being elected president twelve years ago, served as secretary, as dean and as vice-president. At that time the college was established outside the village on the Columbus Pike on the old McMillan property.

During his period of association with the college, the Carnegie library and science hall and the Alford Memorial gymnasium were established and Dr. McChesney has been largely instrumental in placing the school on a firmer basis.

In the first year thirty-six students composed the student body and in 1927 the student enrollment had increased to 243, indicating the great strides made during the intervening years. The original endowment was $20,000 in comparison with the endowment now of $208,000. There have been more than 300 graduates of the college.

Educational work of Cedarville College is also recognized in forty-five other states in this country.

ATTACK BY HATCHET WOMAN ON SOCIETY MATRON BAFFLING

Architect's Wife Is Recovering From Blows On Head

NEW YORK, June 3.—Detectives searching for the mysterious "hatchet woman" who assailed Mrs. Edith Catlin Phelps, socially prominent, were baffled today in their efforts to establish the motive for the attack.

Mrs. Phelps was struck on the head with a hatchet in the doorway of her home by a smartly dressed woman about thirty-five years old as she delivered a box of flowers. Mrs. Phelps was hit with the blunt end of the hatchet, a light, nickel-steel affair. As she sank into a chair, screaming, the woman struck her again.

Quietly, the mysterious assailant walked out the front door and disappeared. It is believed that an automobile was waiting for her.

Failing to find support for any other theory the policie believe the woman was demented.

Mrs. Phelps, who is the wife of Stowe Phelps, prominent architect, was taken to Presbyterian Hospital where, it was said this morning, her condition will not prove serious unless complications develop.

Policemen assigned to the fashionable neighborhood where the Phelps live said they had observed for more than a week an automobile with three men parked a few doors from the Phelps home.

ORA SLATER INVESTIGATING MYSTERY ABOUT YOUTH'S DEATH

CLYDE, O., June 3.—Ora Slater, Cincinnati detective, prominent in the Nesbitt murder case at Troy and the Don Mellett case at Canton, was in Clyde today investigating the two months old mystery surrounding the death of Robert "Bobby" Wilson, 17, of this city, whose body, badly mutilated, was found near the Wheeling and Lake Erie railroad here last March 31.

Slater declared he had been requested to investigate the case several weeks ago, but owing to his presence being necessary at Canton in connection with the Mellett case, he was unable to get away until Thursday. He expects to remain in Clyde several days, he said.

The detective visited the dead youth's father yesterday, and also the undertaker who prepared the boy's body for burial. Later he conferred with city and county authorities regardnig the case.

Slater this morning refused to say whether he had unearthed any important clues in the case.

TWO SOUGHT IN DOUBLE MURDER PROBE

WILKESBARRE, Pa., June 3.—Search for the slayers of Jennie Monica, 19, and Edith Fonzo, 20, cousins, whose battered bodies were found in a lonely field near Pittston, Pa., yesterday, today centered on efforts to learn the identities of two youths with whom the girls are believed to have spent Memorial Day.

The girls' bodies, strangled and bullet riddled, were found near the wrecked car of Carmel Marranca, 34, of Pittston, who contended the machine had been stolen from in front of his home. Marranca's brother, Samuel, 22, who drive the car the day before the bodies were found, is sought.

Police today checked the list of known acquaintances of the two girls, in an effort to learn if they had been seen often in the company of any particular pair.

The girls had apparently been attacked and then choked to death. Bullet wounds in the bodies indicated shots had been fired at close range.

The car in which they were believed to have been slain, was found nearby, wrecked, with several bullet holes in the sides

RELIEF DEMAND IS IMMEDIATE BANKERS STATE

Delegates Attempt To Force Action In Area At Once

CHICAGO, June 3.—A demand that immediate relief measures be considered, today threatened to split the middle western flood control conference as it swung into the second day of its deliberations over a plan to permanently tame the turbulent Mississippi and its tributaries.

Although the conference was called to consider plans for permanent flood control, a determined group of bankers, supported by delegates from regions hardest hit by the inundation, today were preparing to carry a fight for relief action to the floor of the convention.

Randle T. Moore, Shreveport, La., banker, one of the leaders of the relief forces, declared the victims could not wait for congressional action.

"The disaster facing the people of the flood area cannot be helped six months hence," he said. "It must be considered now or it may be too late. I am disappointed that no action for financial relief is proposed by the leaders of this conference."

With the task of perfecting an organization completed, committees were studying the problem today with a view to submitting several proposals to the delegates for final action.

"We hope to work out a practicable proposal behind which all of us can be united at the next session of congress," Senator Watson, (R), Ind., chairman of the resolutions committee declared today.

"Several plans are under discussion but we hope to agree upon one."

The twenty-seven states represented at the conference were virtually unanimous in agreeing the problem must be handled by the federal government.

"Louisiana cannot afford to pay for a new levee system," said Governor John E. Martineau. "The problem affects the entire country directly or indirectly and should be solved by the federal government."

One proposal, calling upon the president to appoint a committee of engineers, business men, economists and agricultural experts to confer with army engineers, now in charge of flood control and report their findings to the president and congress, was being widely supported.

It was introduced by Rep. Porter, (R) Penna., one of the administration leaders in the house and was regarded as representing the president's attitude.

CURIOSITY COST CHARLEY $1,000

NEW YORK, June 3.—Charlie was curious.

When Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh prepared to hop off from New York to Paris he wondered if the newspapers would notice his modest effort. So he left orders for a clipping bureau to dig up any items the newspapers might print.

Today, with two carloads of newspapers already piled up with an obligation of more than $1,000 for clipping service, Mrs. Evangeline L. Lindbergh, mother of the trans-Atlantic hero, ordered them stopped.

The order was transmitted through Henry Woodhouse, president of the Aerial League of America.

ACE REACHES PARIS FIELD AFTER DELAY OCCASIONED BY FOG

Stunts Over Channel Staged By Flyer Despite Heavy Mist

PARIS, June 3.—Captain Charles A. Lindbergh was a boy in short trousers when the World War was being fought, but today he was made an honorary member of the Lafayette Escadrille, one of the most famous air fighting units of the war.

At a luncheon at the International League of Aviators Dr. Edmund L. Gros, founder of the Lafayette Escadrille, presented Lindbergh with a medal making him the only honorary member of the escadrille.

PARIS, June 3. — Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh, America's hero of the skies, arrived back in Paris today. He landed at Le Bourget flying field at 10:02 o'clock after a battle with fog that delayed his flight from London.

Flying at a great height and unescorted by any other plane, Lindbergh arrived over Le Bourget flying field shortly before 10 o'clock. He circled over the field several times descending into lower altitude at each spiral and then made a perfect landing.

Attaches of the flying field rushed out to greet him and congratulate him upon his venturesome flight from England.

Lindbergh had left Kenley airdrome, near London, at 6:20 o'clock, but had to descend at Lympne, on the English side of the channel at 6:58 and was detained there about an hour and fifteen minutes until the fog lifted over the water when he again hopped off at 8:13 o'clock. This time he was able to continue on to Le Bourget without further interruption although the air was thick with mist.

Having been disappointed once (when fog prevented Lindbergh from making his flight yesterday) the French did not turn out in such great numbers as had been expected.

In view of the fact that this visit is "unofficial" there were no ceremonies at the flying field after the American arrived.

Lindbergh made a double landing. His machine came down first upon the civil aviators' field, but as it lightly touched the ground Lindbergh decided that he ought to land in military ground as he was flying a British fighting plane, so he took off and flew very low over the intervening ground to the military hangars only 500 yards away.

The American flew in a British royal air force fighting plane that had been placed at his disposal for the trip. He was escorted as far as the channel by British machines, which turned back at that point.

Immediately after Lindbergh's arrival twelve French military airplanes went up and began flying formation stunts in honor of the American.

Lindbergh watched with keen interest the graceful evolutions of the planes above the flying ground, noting the skill of the French pilots. It was a high honor for a civilian flyer, but Lindbergh's courage and skill are

ARREST ALLEGED MURDERER OF GIRL

DETROIT, June 3.—Leo Penkowski, 22, alias Leo Penn, was arrested here early today and held for Cleveland police on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death there of Elizabeth Skrebis, 20, Monday.

The girl was taken to a hospital by two young men. When the physician pronounced her dead, they fled. Later, Tom Basmagy alias Tom Taylor surrendered to Cleveland police and furnished the name of his companion, who was traced to Detroit.

Basmagy told the police that the girl consented to ride with them, but objected to the route they had taken, and jumped out of the car. She jumped backward and fell, her head striking the pavement.

2,500,000 Russians Await Call to Arms; Soviet Forces a Threat to Half of World

Trouble may be brewing on almost every mile of Russia's far-flung border, but the Soviet has ready one of the most dangerous armies in the world, all under command of Voroshilof, successor to Trotsky. Infantry and artillery units, considered on a par with the best in the world, are pictured above.

By NICHOLAS GOLPIN,
International Illustrated News Staff Correspondent.
Copyright, 1927, (I-I-N).

MOSCOW, (I-I-N Special).—The greatest army in Europe is now at the command of Soviet Russia.

It's a far flung, well equipped army of greater comparative power than the German Imperial Army before the war.

Exact figures are unobtainable. The war office has denied the assertion of the British War Secretary that there are ten million reserves, but a conservative estimate places the number of men under arms and available for immediate mobilization at two and a half million. Voroshilof, Minister of War and in high command of the Soviet forces, in a public speech, boasted of 600,000 men under arms, 100,000 of which are non-commissioned officers. It is safe to say that there are at least three reservists for every active soldier.

The army is divided into three corps: the regulars, territorials, and reserves. As high as 900,000 men a year can be put through the reserves. The better reservists are sent to cadet schools and later military academies for commissioning as reserve officers.

Russian strength does not lie in men alone, although those under arms are well trained. Vast munition factories, for which many of the technical experts have been drawn from Germany, are ready to start war production. It is estimated that a million rifles, five hundred million cartridges, and five thousand machine guns could be added to the Russian stores in a year's time. An actual declaration of war would probably increase the theoretical production.

Russia has a powerful air fleet, too. There are close to 2,000 flying machines available, and twenty factories, now operating, could easily be converted into war purposes.

The Soviet is conducting experiments in poison gas, and her factories and laboratories are now said to be in a high state of efficiency.

"We have invented an anti-gas, and a new mask that will resist all known poisons," boasted Voroshiloff in a recent address.

Tanks, too, are being made, and practically every other known weapon used in the great war or invented since. The navy, too, has been rehabilitated, and is a greater force than any of those of neighboring countries.

Russia has publicly adopted an unprovocative attitude toward foreign nations. Causes for war, as witness the latest exchange with the Pekinese Government, are studiously avoided. Yet the armament programme goes on unabated.

Yet on every front there are rumblings. In China, Soviet aid has been given to the Cantonese forces. Relations with the Pekinese forces are still current that Russian strength are stillcurrent that Russian strength will be thrown with the Cantonese against the Northerners.

Russian influence is being felt in India. Alleged Soviet agitators have time and again threatened British dominance there and in Persia. There are boundary disputes in the Caucasus.

Rumania and Poland look with the same suspicion on Russia that the Soviet looks upon these countries. Both countries carry heavy armaments. The danger of war from these quarters is mentioned by Russians in official speeches. North of Poland are three little States, Lithuania, Esthonia and Latvia, each a potential spark of an international blaze.

War is almost certain to break out in some quarter, though at the moment of writing, all disputes are dormant.

Perhaps Russia believes that a strong army and navy will force her neighbors to hold peace at all cost. Perhaps she knows that war is inevitable, and is determined to come out victor, no matter from which point of the compass it comes.

EASTERN OHIO BUSINESS MEN OPPOSE REVENUE OFFICE MOVE

A delegation of seventy-five Columbus business men and representatives from a number of cities in the central part of the state, motored to the home of United States Senator Simeon D. Fess at Yellow Springs Friday morning and conferred with the senator regarding the proposed consolidation of the internal revenue office for the southern half of Ohio.

The party included the Board of Directors of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce and representatives from Zanesville, Newark, Steubenville, Mt. Vernon, Jackson, Lancaster, Chillicothe, Circleville, Maysville, Logan, Pomeroy and London.

The trip was made in the interest of consolidation of the collector's office at Columbus and the delegates presented figures tending to show why Columbus should be favored over Cincinnati should the offices in these cities be consolidated by the treasury department, in its plan to bring about an annual saving of $100,000.

Senator Fess, while not taking a stand on the question, declared after the conference, it will be a "matter of duty" for him to refer the data with which he was provided, to the treasury department at Washington, D. C.

Senator Fess declared the treasury department plans to consolidate the four internal revenue offices in Ohio now located at Columbus, Cincinnati, Cleveland and Toledo into two offices in the southern and northern sections of the state.

The senator said that in a letter to the department, he had assumed treasury officials would favor the two large cities having the largest collection and more efficiently equipped for this work, if the number of offices are to be reduced from four to two, but that his only connection with the controversy will be to forward data given him on the matter to the department. He will make no recommendations, he said.

The visiting delegation Friday had as its only purpose presentation of data showing why Columbus should be favored over Cincinnati. It was a notable assemblage, which included prominent heads of Columbus business firms and two Ohio State university officials.

The fact his sister-in-law took suddenly ill Thursday night defeated the plan of Congressman John C. Speaks to be present at the conference.

At the request of the visitors, Senator Fess conducted his guests on a tour of Antioch College. Many also spent the latter part of the morning inspecting the flower garden at the Fess home, which is particularly beautiful at this time of the year with the flowers in full bloom. Part of the delegation returned at once to their homes while a few stayed in Yellow Springs through the noon hour.

Warns Middle-Aged Women To Watch These Danger Signs

Thousands of women at the changing time of life are in serious danger—because of poisonous waste matter accumulating in the system, polluting the blood stream and overworking the heart and kidneys, often resulting in chronic hepatic torpidity, gall bladder inflammation or even gall stones.

The symptoms—danger signs—that should be closely watched are dizziness, headaches, shortness of breath, gas in stomach and bowels, pressure or sharp pains in right side that often shoot through to the back, coated tongue, bad breath, lack of ambition, weakness, nervousness, and nights of restless misery.

Failure to heed 'these warning signs" in time may mean months or even years of miserable ill health and perhaps a dangerous surgical operation!

Everyone near or past middle life should guard against hepatic torpidity or any form of gall bladder trouble. And in the opinion of the writer one of the best things in the world for conditions of this kind is the inexpensive home use of Klax-Ko tablets, which Sayre's Drug Store or any other good druggist supply on a binding guarantee to refund their cost, if genuinely beneficial results are not obtained inside of a week! "Klax-Ko" tablets have brought new life and health to hundreds, and they must positively do the same for you or their use will not cost you a penny. Try them today. —Adv.

Your "Regular" Pain Now Needless

Menstruation is a perfectly natural process, but the painful part is NEEDLESS. Long study has absolutely conquered menstrual pain. Science now offers women reliable and complete relief in a simple, utterly harmless tablet called midol.

This newest achievement of the laboratory has nothing to do with drastic habit-forming drugs that kill pain by benumbing the whole system! Midol acts directly on the organs affected by menstruation, and nowhere else. Yet relief and absolute comfort come in five to seven minutes!

So, why have a twinge of pain—feel "low" or even uncomfortable! Or take anything to depress the heart or upset the system? All drug stores have midol in a thin aluminum box that tucks in purse or pocket—for 50 cents.

CITY MUST CONDEMN PROPERTY TO PROTECT PURE WATER SUPPLY

City officials and State Health Director John E. Munger have been informed by Attorney General Edward C. Turner that the city of Xenia is without power, by ordinance, to regulate the use to which property adjacent to the municipal waterworks plant at Old Town may be put, in order to protect its water supply drawn from wells outside the city limits.

It is within the city's power, however, to appropriate sufficient land by condemnation proceedings to protect its supply, the attorney general ruled.

The attorney general's opinion had been asked for by Dr. Munger and city officials in view of an investigation made of supply wells at the Old Town station and the possibility of contamination in the immediate vicinity.

The eight of ten acres of land in question are located west of the Springfield Pike and north of the mill race and lots had been sold by the owner for the purpose of erecting summer cottages. The decision means that the city cannot regulate this land by ordinance in prohibiting the presence of waste matter in the vicinity in order to prevent contamination of wells, but that its only recourse, is by condemnation proceedings.

The decision follows:

"Where water supply of a municipality is obtained from wells, the waterworks plant being located outside the corporation line, then the city commission cannot buy ordinary protection to protect the supply from possible contamination, resulting in the use of adjacent property by its owners."

"Such municipalities," Turner said, "in order to insure the purity of water, should proceed to appropriate under section 3677 and following numbers of the General Code, as much adjacent property as is necessary to prevent pollution of the water."

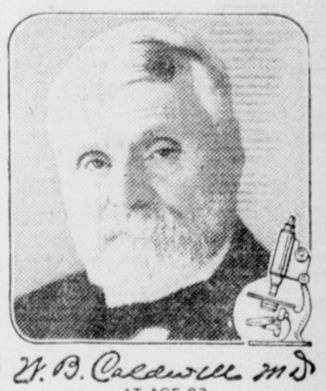

The city had been required of Dr. Munger to enact an ordinance regulating the use to which property adjoining the water supply may be put, and officials were doubtful whether it was operative.

Old Folks Say Doctor Caldwell is Right

W. B. Caldwell M.D. AT AGE 83

When a man is in the 83rd year of his life, there are certain things he has learned that only time can teach him. The basis of treating sickness has not changed since I left Medical College in 1875, nor since I placed on the market the laxative prescription I had used in my practice, known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Then, the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of my Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of Egyptian Senna and other mild laxative herbs, with pepsin.

New medicines are constantly brought out for constipation that contain calomel (which is mercury), salts of various kinds, phenolphthalein (which is acid and coal tar), and minerals. These are all drastic purges, many of them dangerous, and the medical profession is warning the public against them. Certain coal tar products which are offered to people so much nowadays, irritate and poison the tissue of the stomach, intestine, and bowel. Most salts thin the blood and carry off the vital body fluids, making you aenemic and rheumatic.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs which are usually disguised as candy or chewing gum.

My remedy, too, costs less than most others; only about a cent a dose. A bottle of it will last a family several months, and all can use it. It is good for the baby because pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. In the proper dose, given in the directions, it is equally effective at all ages. Elderly people will find it especially ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles. —Adv.

BIBLE THOUGHT

A NEW CREATION:—Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me. Psalm 51:10.

PREVENTING GREAT FLOODS

Issuing a warning that "this year of floods may be followed by others even more severe," Dr. F. H. Newell, distinguished waterways engineer and former chief of the United States Reclamation Service, calls for a comprehensive plan of protection which will embrace the entire Mississippi river system.

Selfish local and sectional politics have resulted in the building of a system of levees, strong at some points and week at others, consequently ineffective as a whole, Dr. Newell charges.

He advocates, subject to thorough engineering study, the building of a federal controlled levee system provided with a series of spillways located at strategic points through which flood waters could be released gradually into unoccupied or sparsely settled lowlands when the danger point is reached. It is theoretically possible, he says, to build, at enormous cost, levees high enough to withstand any possible combination of floods from the seven rivers which make up the Mississippi system, but he questions both the engineering wisdom and economic advantage of such a project.

A suggestion for utilization of spillway areas is made by Dr. Albert Shaw, editor of the Review of Reviews in a discussion of engineering opinion on the problem.

"These areas would assume the character of lakes in one season and of swamps in another," he points out. "They could be utilized for the growth of cypress, the gum and other valuable forest trees that thrive in wet and swampy places."

BAD TEMPER EXPENSIVE

"The temper of a man determines the nature of his relation to society," according to Dr. Henry Knight Miller, widely known psychologist. "You are popular or unpopular, loved or despised, promoted to successful achievement or held in limitation and failure, in large part according to your prevailing tempers, be they good or evil," he contends.

"A man of persistent good temper is loved, respected and cultivated," continues Dr. Miller, "while the ill-tempered man is indeed his own worst enemy. He makes friends only to loose them. Opportunities pregnant with golden possibilities are lost because of his uncontrolled and unlovely temper. He soothes his jaded sensibilities with copious draughts of self appreciation, hates society, snarls at all who antagonize him and sinks lower and lower into the slough of despond, into the morbid quicksand of his own distorted imagination."

Dr. Miller emphasizes the fact that good temper is a product of culture. He says, "it is a result of self mastery, control of negative emotions, proper perspective, sound philosophy of life and a sense of humor."

On the other hand he points out, in Psychology Magazine, a man who is at war with himself, whose inner consciousness knows no harmony, is ill tempered because of his lack of inner poise. He says, "One basic cause of bad temper is selfishness. Start to form habits of unselfishness. Of course, no sane man will neglect his own interests and welfare but he can at the same time manifest an intense interest in the welfare of others and in building a habit of unselfishness he will advance far in the achievement of good temper. The cultivation of a sense of humor is another great aid."

NOT SO HOPELESS

The English are proclaimed as being slow at recognizing humor, but some of them are certainly clever at coining phrases. Lord Dennison some time ago gave this advice to young men: "Don't marry for money—you can borrow it cheaper." Lady Astor is credited with having declared during a debate on the question of giving married women the right to hold jobs, that "women might have twins every year and yet be more efficient than many members of Parliament." Still another member of parliament declared that "God did not make the two sexes equal and Parliament cannot do it in one Friday afternoon." When they get to indulging in repartee members of Parliament are about as clever and apt as found anywhere.

INTERRUPTIONS

WHEN I sit down with my mending
The puss jumps in my lap,
And curls up on the stockings
To take a little nap.

The twins climb up in the evening
As I'm answering my mail,
And tease for a game or a romping
Or a rousing pirate's tale.

Friends drop in when I'm cleaning,
Or struggling to trim a hat,
And I must stop my working
To gossip with them and chat.

These hindrances and distractions
Strangely, do not irk.
Such friendly interruptions
Are pleasanter than work!

KELLYGRAMS by FRED C. KELLY

WHEN A MAN'S UNDER ORDERS

I talked recently to a lawyer friend, assigned by the court to defend a man charged with murder, and he thinks his client is guilty.

He is obliged to put up some kind of defense, but he doesn't like the job.

"Why don't you refuse to do it?" I asked.

"Because," he explained, "somebody has to do it and if I refuse I shall be in contempt of court."

Then I thought of an actor I know who is under contract to a big producer and obliged to obey orders. He has been assigned to a part in which he must say vulgar lines that he can't utter in public without loss of self-respect.

Why, you ask, doesn't he refuse to play such a part? Because he is obliged to make a living at the only kind of work he knows, and if he breaks his contract he would have difficulty in getting another job. He would probably not only lose all hope of further association with the producer he now works for, but would become known to other theatrical employers as a man difficult to handle. Not being an important enough figure to dictate his own terms, he must do the best he can and carry out orders, even at times when they are not to his liking.

It occasionally happens, in every walk of life, that a man doing something he isn't proud of is more to be pitied than censured.

The real blame should not be attached to a man who is an unfortunate victim of conditions, but on those who cause such conditions.

Not long ago an actress spent ten days in jail for appearing in a play called immoral.

If the play really was objectionable the chances are that it was't her fault. The ones who should have been arrested were members of the audience whose purchases at the box-office made the play profitable.

Here is a dandy way to discourage a dirty play or a stupid movie: Don't go to it!

How to Achieve Beauty

Yesterday I gave you several exercises which, if consistently practiced, together with the faithful observance of a sensible diet, will materially aid in reducing overweight and generally proportionalizing the entire body. But for those women who are not burdened with overweight in general, and only want to reduce in special spots, such as the chin, the upper arms and shoulders, the abdomen and waist, or the hips and thighs, I suggest the following:

In practicing any of these exercises, begin slowly at first, gradually increasing in vigor. See that your clothing is loose and that the room is filled with good fresh air. Do them regularly and consistently. You must make them part of your daily routine if you would achieve really worthwhile results.

To Reduce a Double Chin—Place hands on hips, turn the head sharply to the left, until the chin appears above the left shoulder. Hold this position and lower your head backwards, turning your face toward the ceiling. Raise. Repeat ten times slowly but vigorously. Do the same to the right.

2. With hands on hips and body in standing position, twist the trunk to the left and lower your head backward as in exercise number one. Keeping the head turned toward the ceiling, twist the trunk as far as possible to the right. Return the trunk to first position and raise your head. Repeat, this time beginning to the right. Alternating left and right—repeat ten times.

3. Lift the chest high and make all the muscles of the neck tense. Then bend the head slowly downward toward the chest as if overcoming strong resistance. Raise the head slowly. Repeat five times. Then do this exercise five more times, bending the head diagonally and downward, right, toward the chest. Repeat five times, bending the head downward and diagonally to the left.

To Reduce the Upper Arms and Shoulders.—1. Raise the arms sideward to shoulder level, turning the palms up. Bend the arms at elbows until the forearms make a right angle with the upper arms. Now, keeping the elbows at shoulder level rotate the arms forward. Return to position. Repeat ten times.

2. Raise left arm forward and upward and the right arm downward and backward. Reverse the arm position with a forcible swing, the left arm moving downward and backward and the right arm forward and upward. Repeat ten times.

3. Raise the arms sidewise to shoulder level, turning the palms down. Keeping the elbows stiff, make a complete circle inward with the right arm, swinging it down, across and in front of the body, up and back to original position. Do the same thing with the left arm. Repeat, alternating right and left, ten times.

4. Raise the arms sidewise and upward and clap the hands high over the head, swing the arms sidewise and downward, clap the hands behind your head, repeat ten times.

SIGNIFICANT SAYINGS OF THE DAY

"Too much attention cannot be given to the training of the children in the home. Roughly speaking, children spend one-eighth of their time in school; the other seven-eighths is spent in leisure time. So most of the child's training is received in the home. Children do not like advice. They are more apt to do what they see us do, than what they are told to do."—Willard E. Givens.

"What the morons and near-morons do and say is of little or no significance, but when those in high places make fools of themselves the fact that they do so is in itself news and their foolishness will be published so long as the newspaper continues to fulfill its supreme mission of reflecting society as it is."—Edawrd McKernan.

"It is an obvious fact that it takes two to make a good book—a good author and a good reader. No teacher can teach anything unless someone will learn it. I think that pedagogical ideals rest too much on putting all of the responsibility on the teacher. It is because you encounter that in teaching that I am speaking to you. In both literature and education there is altogether too much of that tacit attitude. It takes two, and it takes an effort. No literature worth while can be appreciated unless someone makes an effort."—Dorothy Canfield Fisher.

"It does not take words, but deeds to build a man's character. In the commercial world we judge men by their deeds. Why should we not do the same in the religious world? The religious world demands the same application and judges from the same appearances as other phases of life."—Rev. J. P. Quinius.

"The trouble with the average reformer is that he has too much faith in the policeman and too little faith in the moral value or moral ideals or the average honesty of the average man."—Gov. Ritchie of Maryland.

MAKING MODERN MENUS

MRS. JONES: "Haven't the berries been lovely this year? I have used them every way imaginable."

Mrs. Brown: "I didn't know there were more than two ways to serve strawberries."

Mrs. Jones: "Oh! yes. I use them in making pies and puddings, and cream puffs, as well as serving them in shortcakes and just plain with cream. The season is all too short!"

STRAWBERRY CREAM PUFFS

Crush berries at least half an hour before using, with enough sugar to sweeten. If puffs are home made fill with cream filling or use small cream puffs from the bakery. Just before serving, surround with the crushed berries.

STRAWBERRY SAUCE

One-third cup butter, one cup powdered sugar, one cup crushed berries. Cream the butter, add the sugar gradually. Beat until light and add the berries.

STRAWBERRY PIE

Roll pastry thin and cover the back of a pie plate. Prick with a fork all over to prevent shrinking. Bake in a hot oven (500 F.) about five minutes until light brown. Fill with berries slightly crushed, with sugar. Garnish with whipped cream and whole berries.

VITILIGO

There are several diseases of the skin which are characterized by atrophy, or deficiency in the coloring or pigment, which is normally one of the constituent elements.

One of these diseases is known as vitiligo, and a person who is a sufferer from it has asked me to give a short description of it.

The disease is usually present in middle life, though it may occur, indeed, it is said it most frequently begins, between the ages of ten and thirty. A bad condition of the skin may, therefore, be regarded as one of its basic features.

The first noticeable evidences of it are small, round spots on the skin. These spots gradually enlarge and lose their irregularity of outline, becoming oval, and then quite irregular as contiguous spots coalesce, or run together.

These patches may enlarge very slowly, though continuously, until the entire surface of the body may be included.

A peculiarity of the disease is that the white patches progress symmetrically over the corresponding areas on the two halves of the body, showing that there is an identity in the anatomical conditions of the skin in this disease, in the two halves of the body, which gives equal opportunities for development in each half of any morbid process.

Another peculiarity is that in the vicinity of each white patch there is an accumulation of brown pigment cells, as if they were being pushed forward and piled up as the white or atrophic patches increase.

This gives the appearance of small islands of brown skin in a large field of white, and is particularly noticeable on the face, hands and feet. Another peculiarity consists in the presence of white hairs, single or in small bunches on one or both sides of the scalp, with or without the white patches upon the skin.

In some of the cases the line of demarcation is not sharp and distinct, while in others the islands, or groups of pigment cells above mentioned, may be wanting.

This peculiar disease is progressive, but after it has reached a certain limit it may stop and remain in this condition the remainder of the patient's life.

It has no perceptible bearing upon the health, those who have it are as well as other people, in other respects.

It is sometimes mistaken for albinism, but that is an entirely different disease and it may also be mistaken for leprosy.

The disease is a permanent one, nothing has as yet been tried which will cure it.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Mrs. J. M. T.: Am 80, not very strong and have just learned that I have a soft fibroid tumor of the womb. After they break and run will they die or dry up in time, or can any relief be obtained except by operation?

Answer.—If there are bleeding and suppuration it means that the tumor should be removed as promptly as possible, and a good surgeon would do it for you, probably in a very short time. If you are suffering in either of the ways mentioned, it seems to me it would be well to take the chance of an operation, even at your age, provided you can get in touch with a really skilled surgeon. I have had experience with a great many fibroid tumors in my life, and never knew of spontaneous recovery if the symptoms mentioned were present. Very rarely they shrink and become harmless as old age comes on, but not with such symptoms as you have mentioned.

Ask Dr. Currier that medical question that has been puzzling you. Confine your letter to fifty words and send stamped, addressed envelope for reply. He cannot, of course, make individual diagnoses, and he reserves the right to decide as to the propriety of queries.

Little Old New York

NEW YORK, June 3.—The night before Lindbergh made his flight to Paris I stood talking with him at Forty-second St. and Broadway. He was looking for a "good movie to take up his attention." He said he was taking off in the morning. We stood there for probably ten minutes, and although his picture had been appearing in the newspapers since his spectacular flight from San Diego to Long Island, none of the thousands who drifted past us on the world's busiest corner, appeared to recognize the rangy young man.

Forty-four hours later, Times square was hysterical with joy at the wonder of his achievement, and the entire world was thrilling to the magic of his name.

Broadway is shocked at the news that Lindbergh's maw has turned down a picture offer of $100,000. The viewpoint of Nedick Highway is voiced by Mile-High-Higgins, who phrases it thus: "She an' th' kid are foolish. The public has a way of fergettin' an' th' plaything o' today becomes th' annoyance o' tomorrow. George M. Cohan has been out o' th' limelight fer a couple o' years now, an' I'll bet you he could stroll from the Circle to th' Square any sunny matinee day without gettin' a tumble.

"A guy says to me th' other night, 'Who's th' bird that used to sing: "I'm the Man Who Broke th' Bank at Monte Carlo"?' That's all that fame amounts to. Ask any o' th' younger set who supports musical comedy today who Thomas Q. Seabrook was, an' they ain't a one o' them could tell you.

"My advice to Lindbergh an' his maw is, get it while th' goin's good. They ain't no birds in las' year's nest—an' furthermore, they's nothin' as phoney as a cold fried egg on th' kitchen window sill, two hours after breakfast is over."

A Broadway Belle, with the ink still wet on a short-term movie contract, rushed across town to a newspaper office the other afternoon and inserted the following piteous appeal among the classified:

"Obey that impulse and give this little girl a big hand. Leaving for Hollywood at once. Must sacrifice the beautiful furnishings of the little three-room apartment. There is not a scratch on the piano or a chip out of the Chippendales. No reasonable offer refused."

I shoved the advertisement under the retrousse nose of Cynical Sadie and craved comment.

"The same old story," sighed Sadie, thoughtfully massaging her scalp with the far end of her jade cigaret holder. "After three months on the Coast she'll probably be writing another ad. Instead of 'Give this little girl a big hand,' it'll be, 'Give this little girl an active scrubbin' brush'!

I told her I thought she was prejudiced.

"I got to be," said Sadie dipping a corner of her macaroon into the Oolong. "It's the only way I'm able to pay for my hot groceries."

PRISONERS LOSE TO SCOUT SLUGGERS

Boy Scouts slugged their way to a 27 to 24 victory over the federal prisoners confined in the County Jail, in a soft ball game at Cox Memorial Athletic Field Wednesday afternoon, featured by free hitting on both sides.

Gibney and Finlay formed the battery for the Scouts with Smith pitching, and Dyer behind the plate for the prisoners. Sheriff Ohmer Tate officiated as umpire.

LINDBERGH

'Tis but a common monoplane
A boat we call a flivver,
One wing on either side appears,
A cockpit in the middle.
A rag kept out the sleet and hail,
There was a hole to look out yonder.
And in that airship all alone
Performed a miracle, a wonder.
He left his unassuming home
To do what had ne'er been done—
He felt, he knew what was to come
In case his little stunt was won.
But little did he ever think
When he set out to sail,
The friendships of the world would link
Without one dissenting wail.
Just a single mishap to his ship
Sailing through heaven's blue
Would from this lad all honor strip
And the world his life would rue.
But fortune surely spared the brave
And in this instance so true
It saved him from a watery grave
And for other work to do.
Now the world adown the ages bring
And will so long as day returns
A tribute of its love will sing.
To Captain Charles A. Lindbergh.

BOY SCOUT CABIN PARTLY UNDER ROOF

The Boy Scout cabin being erected north of Cox Memorial Athletic Field is now partially under a shingle roof, according to Scoutmaster R. H. Kingsbury, who is making an urgent appeal for volunteer workers to be on hand and complete the roofing work Friday night at 7:30 o'clock.

Members of the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs and parents of Scouts are asked to take particular notice and be available Friday. Volunteers should wear their old clothes and tennis shoes and each bring a hammer, the Scoutmaster says.

CONSTRUCTION OF WILL SOUGHT HERE IN COURT PETITION

Construction of the will of John A. Harner, late of Spring Valley, who passed away October 24, 1926, leaving no widow but three children as heirs, is asked in a suit filed in Common Pleas Court by Margaret Thornhill, as administratrix of the estate, against John H. Harner, Jessie Ann Harner Huff, Margaret Thornhill, Wilbur H. Thornhill, Horace E. Harner, Rosella E. Haines, and Joseph H. Harner, 18, in minor.

The wife of the decedent, Eliza Ellen Harner, preceded her husband in death, and the following children are heirs to the estate, the petition sets forth: Margaret Thornhill, Jessie Ann Huff and John H. Harner.

The administratrix is in doubt as to the true construction of the will and declares that the action is brought to have the court construe the will as to its true meaning and effect, particularly as to items No. 3, 4, 5, and 6. It is claimed that items No. 3, 4, and 5 bequeath an undivided one-third of the estate to each of the three children and the court is asked to determine whether item No. 6 effects or in any way diminishes or reduces the estate created by items 3, 4 and 5.

According to the petition, Wilbur H. Thornhill is the only child of the defendant, Margaret Thornhill; the defendant, Jessie Ann Huff has no children; and the defendants Horace E. Harner, Rosella E. Haines and Joseph H. Harner are children of the defendant, John H. Harner. Attorneys Miller and Finney represent the plaintiff.

TITLE QUIETED

Plaintiff in the suit of J. Oliver Jobe against John Johnson and others in Common Pleas Court has a legal estate and entitled to possession of property described in the petition, against all of the defendants, according to a decision of Common Pleas Court, which provides for quieting of the plaintiff's title to the land and enjoins the defendants from setting up any claims adverse to the title of the plaintiff, or his heirs or assigns.

Wilcey Moore, at 29, Enters Majors to Find Self a Star

This twenty-nine-year-old, six foot, two hundred pound fellow from Greenville, S. C., is the newest star on big league horizons. Armed with a "heavy" dropping ball he's puzzling batters who face him in the Yankees' box.

By Jack Keene,
International Illustrated News Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK (I.I.N. Special)—Miller Huggins has apparently panned the biggest Nugget of the season from Minors' Creek.

The nugget is Wilcey Moore, who's breaking into the large leagues at the ripe age (for baseball) of twenty-nine. Baseball is that way. The boys come in at between seventeen and twenty. They last for a few days or years, and then go the old route: minors—to farm—to cemetery. Once in a while a fellow keeps going beyond average ten years. Then he becomes a Connie Mack, a John McGraw, or a Miller Huggins, and doesn't have to play. Dazzy Vance broke in at thirty—but then, he was Dazzy Vance.

But Wilcey Moore is Wilcey Moore. He was down in South Atlantic League last year, and he won thirty games.

"Thirty games is thirty games, even in a Y. M. C. A.," roared Huggins. "We must pretend we're Northwest Mounties."

They—the Yankees—got their man. Moore was lassoed a few miles north by east of Greenville, S. C., shipped as baggage to St. Petersburg. Huggins himself broke a bottle of grapefruit juice over his head, launching him as a Yank.

So far this season Huggins has given him frequent practice to show what he can do He went in as relief pitcher three days in succession one week. He allowed one hit in the three days. In his first twenty nine innings in big league company—Moore never faced a big league batter before in his life—he allowed four runs.

Moore's greatest strength lies in a fast ball with a peculiar sudden drop. It's what is known as a "heavy" ball, a ball difficult to knock into the air. This heaviness comes from its peculiar twirl and great speed. During a practice game in the South, Moore pitched four innings without throwing a ball that was hit into the air. Every one of the few hits dribbled along the ground; some stopped dead in the infield.

He'll probably get opportunity to try it often on big leaguers. It appears that Huggins is going to rotate Moore regularly with Pennock, Hoyt, Ruether, and Shocker, or else he'll be used as a reserve to check opposition rallies, one of the most needed forces on any club. Perhaps he'll prove another Marberry.

FLYERS SPARKLE IN OVERWHELMING WIN OVER CEDARVILLE

Pounding out twenty-one hits to score a similar number of runs, the University of Dayton Flyers humbled Cedarville College for the second time this season on the diamond, winning 21 to 5 at Cedarville Thursday afternoon.

It was Dayton's eleventh baseball victory this season. In the previous contest with Cedarville, Dayton was victorious 15 to 5.

The Flyers all fattened their batting averages in compiling the biggest total of runs this season. The winners crossed the plate in every inning but the fifth. McLean and Turner, altenating pitchers for the Yellow-Jackets were entirely ineffective.

Reynolds and Sharpenter divided the mound duty for Dayton.

Sam Hipa was the leading slugger of the afternoon for Dayton, connecting safely five times in six times at bat, including a triple. Lyons, Cedarville third baseman, made three hits and also scored three runs.

Score by innings:

Dayton	2 5 1 5 0 3 1 2 2—21 21 1

EXPERT HERE

The Seeley Co's expert, of Chicago, will personally be at the Miami Hotel, and will remain in Dayton Tuesday only, June 7. Mr. Seeley says:

"The Spermatic Shield will not only retain any case of rupture perfectly, but contracts the opening in ten days on the average case. Being a vast advancement over all former methods—exemplifying instantaneous effects immediately appreciable and withstanding any strain or position no matter the size or location. Large or difficult cases, or incisional ruptures (following operations) specially solicited. This instrument received the only award in England and in Spain, producing results without surgery, injections, medical treatments or prescriptions.

Caution—All cases should be cautioned against the use of any elastic or web truss with understraps, as same rest where the lump is and not where the opening is, producing complications necessitating surgical operations. Mr. Seeley has documents from the United States Government, Washington, D. C., for inspection. Our expert will be glad to demonstrate without charge or fit you if desired. HOW MRS. WEAVER WAS HELPED

As Mrs. Weaver herself says, "I was never very strong." This is a mild statement describing her condition, for, according to her letters, she was subjected to no small amount of ill health. Fortunately, her sister was familiar with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and begged Mrs. Weaver to try it. "After three or four weeks," writes Mrs. Weaver, "I felt a great difference in myself. I would go to bed and sleep sound, and although I could not do very much work, I seemed stronger. I kept on taking it and now I am well and strong, do my work and take care of three children. I sure do tell my friends about your wonderful medicine, and I will answer any letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Lawrence Weaver, East Smithfield St., Mt. Pleasant, Pa.

If you knew that thousands of women suffering from troubles similar to those you are enduring had improved their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, wouldn't you think it was worth a trial?

You can save many dollars by having your coal cellar filled now. The coal strike now on is sure to send prices way up next fall and coal may be hard to get at any price. Get yours now.

TABLET PRESENTED TO INSTITUTION AT PROGRAM THURSDAY

Many Visitors Attend Unveiling Rites In Home School

Originators and founders of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home were honored Thursday afternoon when a tablet in their memory was presented to the institution with an elaborate program in the high school auditorium.

Ohio Department, Women's Relief Corps, donated the tablet which contains the names of the Home's founders, and it was unveiled before the audience in the school auditorium with appropriate exercises. The tablet will be mounted later.

Mrs. Mary J. Wilson, Dayton, chairman of the program, presided and her opening address gave a history of the G. A. R. fifty-seven years ago. Col. T. E. Andrews, Home superintendent, gave the address of welcome. The tablet presentation was made by Mrs. Ida J. Whitehorm, Delta, O., president of the Ohio Department, W. R. C., and was accepted by Levy H. Derby, Norwalk, department commander of the G. A. R., who, in turn, presented it to the Home board of trustees. Col. Rell G. Allen, Washington C. H., member of the board, accepted it for the institution.

Two Home pupils, sons of veterans of two different wars, unveiled the tablet. They were Richard Sarves, son of a Civil War veteran and Paul Alexander, son of a Spanish American War veteran. Leverne Crawford, son of a World War veteran, recited a poem during the unveiling exercises.

A number of addresses were heard before the program concluded. Adjutant General Frank B. Henderson, represented Governor Donahey; Mayor John W. Prugh spoke for the citizens of Xenia; Mrs. Edith M. Christy, Oberlin, national president of the W. R. C., represented that organization; Mrs. T. E. Andrews, chief matron of the Home, welcomed the women's organizations; A. W. Hudson, Dayton printer, one of the first children admitted to the Home in 1869, spoke briefly.

Governor Fred C. Runkle, of the National Military Home, Dayton, brought greetings from that institution. Among others on the program were the Rev. Henry J. Becker, Dayton, department chaplain of the G. A. R., who gave the invocation; Anna Loy May, Dayton, who gave "Lest We Forget;" Mrs. R. H. Grube, Xenia, who spoke in memory of her father, Captain William Earnshaw, whose name is on the tablet; Dr. W. A. Galloway, Xenia, who spoke in memory of several others whose names were on the tablet; Lewis R. Cope, Dayton, who represented the designers of the tablet;

Miss Faye Cavanaugh, Xenia, who represented the Daughters of Veterans; Mrs. Helen Brinkle, Dayton, who represented the Spanish American War Auxiliary; Mrs. Middleton, Urbana, representing the American Legion Auxiliary; Otho Noble, Columbus, representing Spanish American War Veterans; Dr. J. King Gibson, Dayton, chaplain of the National Military Home, who pronounced benediction.

General J. Warren Keifer, Springfield, former department commander of the G. A. R., whose name is on the tablet, was not present although he is the only living member of the honored group. During the program the Home Band furnished music and the audience sang "America" and repeated the oath of allegiance to the flag.

SENIORS CLASS PLAY WELL PRESENTED ON SECOND NIGHT HERE

The Thursday night audience of "The Thirteenth Chair," mystery play cleverly presented by the senior class of Central High School, lost none of the effectiveness of the piece, in comparison with Wednesday night, due to the fact that several new characters in the play were equally capable in their parts.

Jean B. Elwell Auditorium was again filled for the second performance. The feminine parts of the play were filled with new actresses Thursday night and the unique arrangement only served to enhance interest in the production. New characters Thursday night, were Thelma Osborne, as the maid; Mildred Fudge, as "Helen O'Neill;" Eleanor McKay as "Mrs. Crosby;" Dorothy Norckauer, as "Mary Eastwood," Evelyn Perrill as "Helen Trent," Louise Miller as "Elizabeth Erskine," Thelma Wagner, as "Grace Standish," and Mary Anna Wolford, as "Madame Rosalie LaGrange."

Male parts in "The Thirteenth Chair" lost none of their acting ability in the second performance and worked well with their new cohorts. In its entirety, "The Thirteenth Chair" was a clever piece, well presented by two capable casts.

CEDARVILLE COLLEGE BOARD ORGANIZES THERE THURSDAY

Dr. J. R. Orr, Pittsburgh, Pa., was re-elected president, Probate Judge S. C. Wright, secretary, and Dr. F. A. Jurkat, treasurer of the board of trustees of Cedarville College at the board's annual meeting in Cedarville Thursday.

The trustees approved an appropriation of $15,000 a year by the state department of education for normal school work at the college.

A tentative arrangement had been made between the board and State Director of Education Vernon Riegal. With the additional income, the college will be able to add four or five new teachers to the payroll in the normal department.

Professor Harley Smith, New Burlington, resigned as a member of the faculty and his place has not been filled.

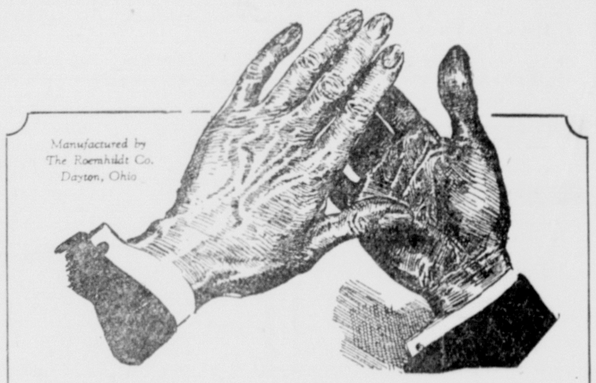

The treasurer reported that the college's endowment fund is now more than $200,000 in comparison with the endowment of $186,000 last year. During the year the institution will also receive a fund of $25,000 bequeathed by Miss Christian Arbuckle, Pittsburgh, Pa.

In addition to approving the degrees and authorizing that they be bestowed on graduates at commencement exercises, the trustees approved the awarding of the degree of bachelor of divinity upon the Rev. Thomas White, pastor of the Third Reformed Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, Pa.; and the degree of doctor of divinity upon the Rev. James L. Chesnut, pastor of the Third Presbyterian Church, Ft. Wayne, Ind., son-in-law of Judge S. C. Wright.

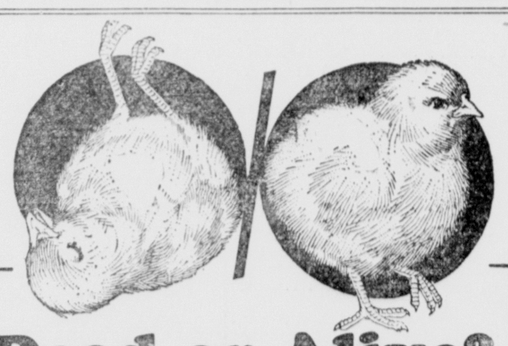

All members of the board were present at the meeting with the exception of William R. Collins, Columbus, and Dr. Homer B. Henderson, Groveport, Pa.

Board members in attendance included Dr. Orr, Dr. Homer MacMillan, Atlanta, Ga.; Dr. David McKinney, Cincinnati; Judge Wright, Xenia; Frank Hastings, Xenia; the Rev. William R. Graham, Lafayette, Ind.; Dr. McChesney, Dr. Jurkat, Dr. M. I. Marsh, George H. Hartman, and Walter C. Iliff, Cedarville.

Practically all the important business was transacted in the afternoon as the morning session was devoted to routine matters.

How Tires Came To Be Invented!

Shorty Interviews The Inventors

Last week I told you folks out front about my discovering that Mr. Carroll and Mr. Binder were the inventors of Automobile Tires. Since that time I have received thousands of letters from all points of this country many of the writers calling me every thing from a liar on down to WORSE than that!

In order to get this question settled I have taken the time from my milking to go over to the Carroll Binder Shop and interview the two partners FULLY on the subject. The following is the interview just as I received it taken down in short-hand.

Q. "Why did you invent automobile Tires?"

A. "Yes and NO! Bunty is a great deal older than that even if he DOES deny it."

Q. "Was it a big burst of thought or did the idea come on gradually like kidney trouble?"

A. "There are three good ways to kill a chicken the first one being to chop off its head. Inasmuch as this makes the chicken quite dead there is no particular use in even SPEAKING of the other five ways! IS there?"

Q. "After inventing Tires what other amusement did you take up?"

A. "I always like mine sunny side up with a very very small ration of bacon and this with a wee piece of well browned toast suffices me until supper. I eat practically nothing at noon."

Q. "Do you feel that posterity should leave you two a couple of seats in the Hall of Fame on account of what you have done with Tires?"

A. "Positively I do NOT believe in the transmigration of souls as applied to cock-roaches, fleas and fish-worms. It is all very clear to me on this point."

Q. "Do you believe that the enormous sale of Tires you now have is in any way induced by the fact that you invented them?"

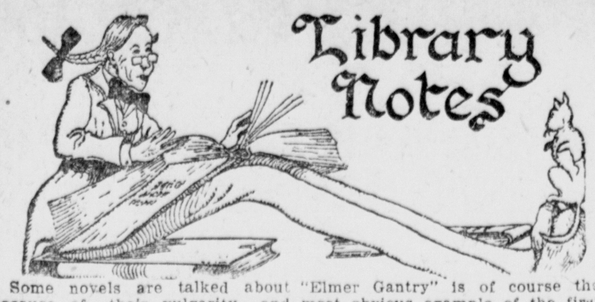

A. "Some do and some DON'T! I have found this to be the case invariably! Nothing can change me in this respect."

Q. "Why do you carry only the best Tires on the market and why are you able to sell them cheaper and give more service on them than most folks?"

A. "The auto is here to stay in SPITE of what Volstead and Mister Haines says to the contrary! I know this to be true after talking to an old fashioned Horse-Fly—really one of the most discouraged bugs I EVER met!"

Now that I have proven way beyond doubt that Carroll and Binder DID invent Tires I hope I won't need a truck to tote the mail I get from folks who want to make a sucker outta me. I thank you for your attention and hope that this dry spell will let up—if you gather what I mean.

THE CARROLL-BINDER CO

Some novels are talked about because of their vulgarity and people are afraid to read them only because they are afraid to be out of the swim by not doing so. Others are talked about because of their sincerity, art and power.

"Elmer Gantry" is of course the most obvious example of the first sort. "The Old Countess," by Anne Douglass Sedgwick of the second.

Like the so popular "Little French Girl" by the same author this new novel is an interracial drama and shows the same skilled delineation and differentiation of Gallic and Anglo Saxon psychology. Taken all in all this last book is a finer piece of work than any that have preceded it. The author with fewer characters and greater economy of detail, has succeeded in making it more compact and more swift moving in its sweeps toward the inevitable catastrophe. The setting is in perfect tune with the action. Everything is significant. It reminds one of Thomas Hardy's "Return of the Native," in the way in which the characters are borne on ruthlessly on the flood tide of their passions. Just as the river rises and sweeps all before it, so do the passions of the actors rise and sweep against the barriers of conventions, old loyalties and honor.

In the drawing of her characters the American author has shown her usual power. The old countess, malignant, yet pitiful, Marthe, tragic in her loneliness, pouring out the beauty of her soul upon her animals. There is Graham, moody, hard-hearted, devoted to his wife but passionately in love with Marthe, and there is Jill, sane candid loyal who after all is the main stay of Graham's life.

This is no piece of light reading. It is in fact an unsparingly honest, a hopelessly tragic story. But it is not a tragic quality that will make the book unpopular. The reader is pressed against the iron spikes of tragedy but they are not driven in. It is like grave music bright in spots but sweeping steadily to a tragic close. But even the tragedy is beautiful because so inevitable.

DRAMATIC CLUB OF ANTIOCH TO OFFER PROGRAM ON FRIDAY

Three one-act plays are to be presented by the Antioch College Dramatic Club at the Yellow Springs Opera House Friday night. They are entitled, "O'Flaherty, V. C.," a play by Bernard Shaw; "Bad Debts," by Margaret Searle; and Booth Tarkington's popular "Station YYYY."

The club regularly presents three brief plays every month in the school theater, members of the cast reading their parts. Then near the close of the school year, three favorite plays are selected and presented in the regular way, each player committing his lines to memory.

The complete cast of "O'Flaherty, V. C.," follows: "Sir Pierce," Paul Nosker; "O'Flaherty," Avery Leiserson; "Mrs. O'Flaherty," Katherine Fittz; "Tessie," Clarabelle McKnight.

"Bad Debts" has the following cast: "Chester," Richard Potter; "Mrs. Chester," Beatrice Stevens; "Norton," Edwin Loe; "Janet Chester," Dorothy Hilbert;; "Banester," Selby Fiske.

The concluding play has the following cast: "Mr. Winstead," Hamilton Stone; "Mrs. Winstead," Hester Bassett; "Caroline," Rita Fisher; "Anita," Anne Carr; "Herbert," Francis Potter; "Charles," Griscom Morgan; and "Roger," Leland Crossman.

TINGLEY MANAGES CEMETERY COMPANY

Lewis C. Tingley, former executive secretary of the Xenia Chamber of Commerce, is the organizer and general manager of Resthaven Memorial Park and Cemetery, at Louisville, Ky.

Mr. Tingley was president and director of sales for the Memorial Park Cemetery in Dayton before going to Louisville where he has sold approximately $100,000 worth of shares in the similar enterprise. Several Dayton men are interested financially with him in the Louisville project.

Mr. Tingley expects to go into cemetery development in a larger city after leaving Louisville.

BILIOUS? DON'T BE!

Biliousness is a symptom, not a disease. A sour, sick, belching, gassy stomach gets that way because of neglected constipation. Ordinary laxatives don't seem to help much, because the liver, the stomach, the spleen, and the intestines, all have to be aided. Constipation slows up the function of and interferes even with the brain's activity.

Blackburn's Casca-Royal Pills arouse the liver, tone up the stomach and intestines, stimulate the glandular secretions, in a pleasant, perfect way. When the internal organs function regularly, away goes biliousness, sour stomach, and indigestion.

Have you a throbbing at the temples, a bad taste in the mouth, halitosis (unpleasant breath), sour, bilious stomach, dark rings under the eyes and an irritable don't-care languor? Take Blackburn's Casca-Royal Pills. Wake up your ambition and energy and feel good every day. In less than a dozen hours you will be on the "Wellville" road. Forty-five pills—30 cts—at all drugstores.

CHEERING CROWDS AND WAVING FLAGS

The Rates are lowered

but the standards are high as ever

Some people judge everything by price. They think anything very expensive must be very good.

Most people don't.

I see that proved by public appreciation of our recently lowered rates.

We're trying to make the Winton the best hotel "value" ever offered the public—and the public likes it.

Winton service and comfort couldn't be better at double the price. The beds couldn't be softer, the linen cleaner, the rooms airier, the staff politer if you paid us twice as much.

The steward who buys the food is as particular as your wife. The chef is as fussy in his kitchen as your wife is in hers. The waiters are swift, silent, and they never bring a medium steak when you've said rare.

The Winton is a good place to stop . . . good to you and good for your checkbook. Will you be my guest?

WILE SAYS:

members were deeply impressed with Mr. Coolidge's sympathetic grasp of the southland's plight. Representative Kemp told the president that the rehabilitation of 600,000 people presents problems of such proportions that only congress could be expected to solve them.

* * *

The waters already are receding in a large part of the valley. Before many weeks the time will have come when all of the 600,000 will be able to return to their homes. It is then, Mr. Kemp contends, that the most difficult phases of the situation must be met. Unless some means can be devised which will enable these people to get into production, the consequences will be nation-wide. The Louisianian's plan is to have party leaders agree on a rehabilitation policy and commit themselves to limit the duration of the special session to one week, or ten days at the most. The session would be for the sole purpose of helping the people to get on their feet economically and would not consider flood control legislation in any form. Representative Kemp urged the president to call congress as esoon as the foregoing assurances had been obtained.

One of the novel features of the idea of a strictly "flood session" of congress is that senators-elect William S. Vare, of Pennsylvania, and Frank L. Smith, of Illinois, should be invited to stay at home. They are, of course, entitled to seek admission to the senate of the next session of congress, but it is recognized on all hands that if they did so at a special session, a controversy would immediately be provoked, and all other business indefinitely held up. One of the administration's objections to a special session before next winter is understood to be the fear that Vare-Smith affair might frustrate the principal object of calling house and senate to Washington.

Representative Kemp, on the other hand, placed much emphasis, in his conversation with President Coolidge, upon the necessity of securing rehabilitation legislation while the country's attention is focused on the disaster. The congressman holds that it might be fatal to delay and thus dull the interests of the nation in seeing that full justice is done. Representatives Riley J. Wilson and Whitmell P. Martin, Democrats, of Louisiana, joined in the demand for a special session.

It is their opinion that congress should authorize an appropriation of $500,000,000, to be expended at the rate of $50,000,000 annually, for reconstruction of levees, highways and such other work as may be found feasible in connection with a new program of flood prevention. Messrs. Wilson and Martin think that the crying need is liberalization of the farm loan act, or the setting up of special credit machinery for the benefit of persons who have lost their all and are in no position to obtain credit through existing channels.

* * *

Representatives Wilson and Martin favor an extra session not limited in its duration, but which would merely give precedence to flood legislation.

ACE REACHES PARIS FIELD AFTER DELAY OCCASIONED BY FOG

such that the French hold him equal to any military ace.

In the meantime Lindbergh's borrowed plane was being rolled into a military hangar which was immediately locked up so souvenir hunters could not get at it and damage it.

The American airman entered the hangar and it was there that the formal greetings took place.

The party that welcomed the young flyer was composed of Parmely Herrick, son of Myron T. Herrick, American ambassador to France; F. B. Mahoney, president of the Ryan Airlines, builders of "The Spirit of St. Louis"; a few attaches of the American embassy and some French officials.

An imperial airways plane—a passenger carrying machine—from Croydon, just outside of London, landed at Le Bourget five minutes after Lindbergh.

One of the passengers, M. Ehrlich, told an interesting story about the flight.

"We followed Lindbergh from Lympne," said M. Ehrlich, "and we were certainly thrilled and entertained by what we saw. When he got out over the English channel he began to do "stunts" for his own amusement. He looped the loop and went through other evolutions whose names I do not know. But once on the French side of the channel Lindbergh made a straight line for Paris and flew at high speed without any more evolutions."

M. Ehrlich said that fog was encountered all the way from England to the French flying field. He said that from Lympne to Le Bourget Lindbergh flew at an average altitude of 3,000 feet.

Elaborate police precautions had been taken to handle a great crowd of men and women but they were not needed. In addition to newspaper reporters and photographers there were only a score or two of civilians, but they made up in enthusiasm what they lacked in numbers.

Lindbergh's baggage, including a hat box and a package, was placed in the American embassy Rolls Royce and at 10:20 the car departed for Paris bearing Lindbergh, Herrick and Capt. White of the embassy staff. Mahoney followed in another car.

Lindbergh remained secluded in the embassy during the morning but he went to luncheon in the Bois De Bologne headquarters of the International League of Aviators and again it was demonstrated that the French have not had enough of this young hero for hundreds lined the Bois to cheer him.

At the International League of Aviators luncheon on behalf of the league Lindbergh presented the Japanese aviator Abe, through the Japanese embassy, with a trophy for his flight from Tokyo to Paris. He also presented the league's medal to Captain Pelletier De Olsy for the most notable French aviation achievement in 1926, his long flight to the east.

So the kids can badges win.

Everybody was playing marbles. Even the girl members of the Ritzie club had taken an interest in the game. Patsy often kept score while Marty, the twins, and several of the neighbor boys held a play tournament. Betty had made marble bags for each of her fellow Ritzies and had frankly admitted that she would like to learn the game "just to be able to own the bright, colored marbles."

"Let's hold a regular marble tournament," suggested Tag to the other Ritzies, who were sitting in their "comfy" canvas chairs in the carpenter shop.

"It wouldn't be any fun unless we could give badges to the winners and they cost a lot of money," objected Marty.

"Why not make the badges?" suggested Patsy.

The boys would have scoffed at the idea if Patsy hadn't already shown her skill at making things too often to be ridiculed without being given a try.

"If we can find some old pins, the kind that mother calls a 'brooch,' I can doctor them up with sealing wax and make them look like regular badges. How many do you need?"

"If we play off a regular tournament, there can only be one real winner, but I think we should award a second and third prize to the last two eliminated," said Marty.

this last year for Christmas, along with a box of letter paper.

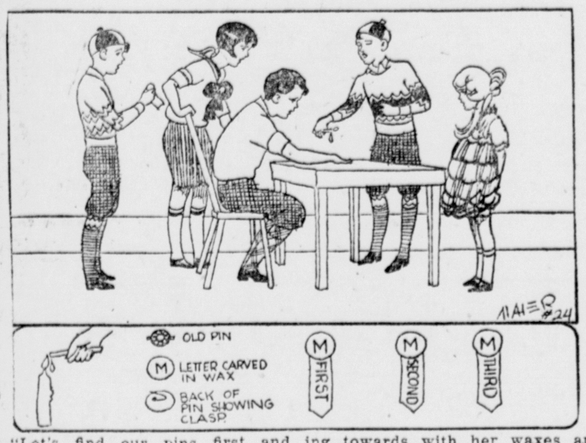

The Ritzies were wondering what this collection of old materials had to do with the making of marble badges and they gathered around Patsy's desk to see what she would do with them.

Choosing the biggest pin for the foundation of the first badge, she melted the stick of gold-colored sealing wax over the lighted candle, allowing the wax to drop on the face of the pin. She pressed this down in a regular pattern with a stick of wood and before the wax had time to harden, stamped Marty's monogram on the center, which left a big M on the top of the pin.

"The M stands for Marbles," she explained, as she searched through her box of doll ribbons and finally selected a black, grosgrained ribbon about an inch and a quarter wide. She turned back the two corners at the one end and tacked them down with black thread. This left the ribbon pointed at one end and she cut it off at the other so that it was just four inches long. Fastening the straight end to the cross-pin at the back of the brooch, she held up her finished work.

"Why, it does look like a badge," exclaimed Tag. "Just like the ones they gave over at Center playground last year for swimming."

Now that the boys and Betty knew just what Patsy was working towards with her waxes and ribbons, they could give suggestions for the other two badges.

"Let's find our pins first, and then we can decide which shall be first, which second, and so on." Patsy had to almost pull Tag and Rag out of their chairs to get them started on the search for old brooch pins. They liked the idea of making badges, but didn't think it was exactly a man's job to go hunting about for old pins.

"Your mother may have the very pin we want for first prize!" admonished Patsy, as she sent them off home in search of material for badges.

Little did Patsy imagine that she was prophesying the truth when she sent them home in this fashion, and yet when they had all assembled again in the little carpenter shop and displayed their trophies, the twins had the two prettiest pins in the lot. This seemed quite funny to the Ritzies, but they didn't realize that had the two pretty old pins been laying about Patsy's or Betty's house, they would have claimed them long before for their dolls.

Patsy had brought some sticks of sealing wax from the house, a piece of an old candle, and Marty's letter sealing monogram which stamped the initial M on the tips of envelopes. He had been given

It was decided that the second prize should be a silver badge with a blue ribbon and that the third should be white with a red ribbon. When they were finished, Patsy applied stick-on letters to the ribbons which spelled out the words: First, second and third. (These stick-on letters can be found at most any drug store or variety shop.)

When all three badges were lined up on Patsy's desk, the twins gave a rousing cheer. They really thought they were the best badges they had ever seen.

"When do we start the marble tournament?" they asked.

"As soon as we get our rules worked out," answered Marty, and they all got busy with pencil and paper.

If you are planning a marble tournament or races for a picnic, Ritzie badges would make the contest seem worthwhile. You will be sure to find some big, old brooch pins around the house, and with these as a foundation the rest will be easy, if you follow Patsy's directions.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Out in Billings, Montana, a few years ago a young man is said to have done a parachute jump from a plane for $15. There is no reason for qualifying the statement, except that there is still doubt as to whether he actually collected the $15. As this is being written theatrical managers, film producers and divers and sundry promoters have bid up to and exceeding a million dollars for this young man's services. Never has there been such a sudden and popular burst of fame as is now being experienced by this courageous youth. It is not his fame alone that has brought the managers to him with their offers of gold. They recognize that Captain Lindbergh is unwittingly the greatest showman ever known to showmen.

Most of the offers made to Lindbergh as reported in press dispatches, according to reliable New York amusement publication, have been genuine, although the shoestring opportunists no doubt also have flattered the young hero. Adolph Zukor, a recognized leader in the film industry is reported to have called personally on the flier in Paris with an offer of a $300,000 contract. Roxy, famous New York showman, is known to have offered a $25,000 a week for two weeks' appearance at the Roxy Theatre, New York. The Paramount Theatre in New York which has just signed an agreement to pay Paul Whiteman $10,500 a week for the services of himself and orchestra over the period of a year, is a contender for Lindbergh and in the show-down is expected to get him.

As a financial genius, Captain Lindbergh is a tower of strength. Here is a boy who was willing to risk his savings, $2000, plus courage and his life, in an enterprise that seemed dubious. Even the young bankers in St. Louis who finally pooled together enough money to finance his excursion considered the investment a bad risk. But the young man who made a scant living by risking his neck was willing to stake all his resources on the venture and how could his prospective backers, whose feet were literally on the ground, refuse to take a chance with him?

Robert McLaughlin had the big idea not long ago of starring Glenn Hunter next season in "Hamlet," according to Burton Rascoe, New York writer. Hunter was to be billed as "the youngest Hamlet." Hunter at first refused to consider the project; he was frightened at the notion of being compared with John Barrymore.

Later on, however, Hunter emerged from a long study of the Shakespearean play with a new hunch about the proper interpretation of the role. He had discovered from the text that Hamlet did not care for men, nor very much for women, either. He must, then, concluded Hunter, have had affection for a dog.

Hunter made some researches and discovered that Great Danes were very popular in England at about the time Hamlet was first played in the Globe Theater. His idea was that the famous soliloquy was addressed to a dog, a Great Dane. He planned, then, to introduce an innovation into the tradition of the play. He would have a Great Dane lie at his feet while he stroked the dog's head and completed the soliloquy.

Some friends pointed out that dramatic critics would wise-crack about the "melancholy Great Dane" and this has worried Hunter; but the next season will probably see a "Hamlet" as Hunter conceives it —that is, with a Great Dane in it.

WINCHESTER, Va., June 3.—In her home here, Mrs. Richard Evelyn Byrd is awaiting tranquilly the moment when her son, the intrepid North Pole flyer, will start his flight to Paris, which she intends to witness. Confident that her boy will succeed in his perilous quest, she plans to go to New York as soon as Commander Byrd advises her of the time of his take-off, to wish him Godspeed on his trans-atlantic journey.

The aged woman, mother of three distinguished sons, has complete confidence that her boy, who braved the Arctic wastes successfully in his flight across the North Pole last year, will be equally triumphant in his attempt to join New York to the French capital over the air route.

Commander Byrd, who is in daily communication with his mother over the long-distance telephone, has assured her that he will not leave without giving her the date and time of the hop-off, in order that she may go to New York to watch him start.

Mrs. Byrd has two sons besides the famous aviator. One is Harry Flood Byrd, governor of Virginia, the other Thomas B. Byrd, of Winchester. Both of them will accompany their mother to New York for Commander Byrd's start.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED—

The entrance of America into the World War, finds Phillip Wynne Tracy IV suffering from the collapse of his first passionate love affair. Before this, he and Natlee Jones, who was the daughter of the Tracys' milkman, had had a childish engagement which was objected to by both Mrs. Tracy and Mr. Jones.

Phillip becomes interested in Lyra Hilliard, an old friend of his mother's.

The whole affair, however, sinks into nothingness because war is declared.

Rod and Phil are the first to enlist. Natlee goes to the depot to see them off and in her anxiety to see Phil she ignores Rod entirely. This nearly breaks his heart.

Phillip finds he must leave for the southern training camp before seeing his mother again. Here he has a most unusual experience with a nameless girl. He gets detailed to kitchen police and his passes revoked.

On an impulse of pity, Phil proposes marriage to the nameless girl. Here the story further unfolds—

"But—I cannot take your money," she said again, rather wildly.

CHAPTER XXXII

PHIL BIDS GOOD-BYE TO GLADYS

ALL the next day Phil was as nervous as a cat.

It seemed to him as though he had never seen so many telegrams delivered to other men in the outfit since he had been at Fort Bliss. Marta and her mother came up for parade, but Lieutenant Andrews arranged matters in such a way that he did not get a chance to speak to them.

Marta, however, managed to convey to him that the lieutenant was not making a hit with her, even while he was escorting them to their car.

It was then that Phil received two telegrams and smiled for the first time that day. He realized that Andrews was doing him a favor by taking Marta and her mother away just at that moment. It was not punishment to give him a chance to read his anxiously awaited messages from his mother.

One, of course, was the request that he call at the office and receive a sum of money from some one that he should name. The other was a day letter which almost made him decide not to call for it. His mother had wired:

"What is the matter, son? Are you in great trouble? I cannot understand why you should want such a large sum of money as your allowance has been sent you every week. I requested the Trust Company to send it weekly instead of monthly, the day after you went away. Do you want me to come down? I am greatly worried. I have also wired Rod asking him if you were all right. At first I had determined to get on the train and go to you, but Major Aukland said he thought it would be much better to let you work it out for yourself. He advised me to send you the money and say nothing, but I cannot refrain from telling you that if you need me I will start on the next train. Your loving and much worried Mother."

The moment he read this wire, he hurried out to find Rod.

"I was hunting for you, Wynne," he said. "I have just had a wire from your mother. She seems to have gotten into her head that you are in trouble. What have you been doing, writing for money?"

"I wired yesterday evening for $1,000."

Rod gave a prolonged whistle. "Been gambling?"

"Yes."

"That is a pretty big sum, Wynne, even for you to lose."

"Oh, hell! Stop your preaching, Rod. Neither you nor mother seem to realize that it really is my own money. Besides, I am not sure that I have lost it."

Rod looked mystified, but as usual after the one outburst he said nothing more except to volunteer to identify him.

"I think the telegram I received from Mother this morning will do that," returned Phil, loftily.

"They say that all the red-light district is to be broken up tonight," continued Rod. "I expect every tough guy in the regiment will be there to see the fun. For my part, I think it will be rather a good place to stay away from."

Phil knew exactly what Rod meant by this speech, but he made no comment except, "I feel rather sorry for those poor women."

Rod gave him a searching glance under which Phil felt himself color as he turned away with the information that he was going down to get his money.

Rod acted as though he wanted to say something more, but Phil hurried out of hearing.

When he had received the money in ten $100 bills, he did feel a little nervous for himself and for Gladys.

HE wanted to get it to her as soon as possible and close the incident, but he was afraid for her after she had gotten it in her possession.

He was glad there happened to be no one in the telegraph office at that time.

When he arrived at the "narrow street" he knew the reason why.

It looked as though every man in and out of the army was in that drunken, jostling, swearing crowd.

When he had succeeded in reaching the place that he knew had belonged to Gladys, he found the door shut and the curtain down.

Contemptuously he was turning away when the door was opened just enough for a hand to be thrust out and grasp his sleeve.

"Come in," said Gladys, in a low voice.

She fairly pulled him in and quickly slammed and locked the door.

"I was running no chance of missing you," she said. "It is a terrible lot of animals that are growling out there. Sometimes I thought they would break in the door."

Phil looked at her. She had clothed herself in a street dress of dark blue. Her hat and coat lay across the bed while on the floor beside it was a pitifully small bag.

"Do you think it will be safe for you to go away tonight?" he asked.

"Not very," she answered. "I would have gone this afternoon, but —but—you said you were coming."

"I'm sorry, Gladys, that I have kept you, but I could not get here before. I did not get the wire until about two hours ago."

She looked her question, but did not speak.

Phil unbuttoned a pocket in his tunic, took out the bills and thrust them into her hand.

She drew away so quickly that they fell to the floor, and she could see that they were all yellow backs.

"You should not have come into the street tonight with all that money, Wynne, your life would have been in great danger if it had become known that you had it."

"I expect so, Gladys. How can you hide it so that you will be safe with it? You see, I did not know how to get it to you any other way. I knew you could not use a check."

The girl slowly bent down, and picked up the money. Rising, she held it out to Phillip.

He held his hands to his sides and shook his head.

"You must take it, Wynne. Don't you see I cannot keep it?"

Again he shook his head.

"But—but I cannot take your money," she said again, rather wildly.

"Have you enough of your own to take you somewhere—where you can at least rest for a while?"

"I have just $50. I have not been able to earn much lately, but I have saved all the money you left the two times you have been here."

"Well, that roll of bills is what I'm going to leave on my third and last visit."

The girl looked at him dumbly.

"Take it, Gladys. It really means nothing to me. I want you to have it for two reasons—first, because you need it probably more than I shall ever need money, and secondly, because you have shown me that there are sincere, honest women in the world."

"HONEST—me?" faltered Gladys.

"Sure. You have been honest with me as a man is honest. A man does not need to be continent to be honest, but he must not lie or steal. My dear, I think you have all the virtues but one.

"When I am gone, you had better keep your door locked until tomorrow morning, and then get out of town as soon as possible."

"Wynne, I will take this money, for as you said last night, 'it is a way out,' and if you ever think of me after tonight, will you remember that I am proud of what you just said to me?"

"Some day you will know that men and women are all alike—good, bad and indifferent. The things that make men honest are the things that make women virtuous, for virtue does not mean one thing in a man and another thing in a woman. Very soon the world is going to acknowledge that. Will you remember that you first heard it from a woman like me?"

She thrust the money into her bosom and made as if to hold out her hand. Phillip started to grasp it, but instead of letting him clasp hers, she quickly unlocked the door and took hold of his arm and thrust him forth.

He heard the lock click. Then he walked swiftly down the street.

After he left Gladys' doorway, he walked quickly to the telegraph office and wired a night letter to his mother.

"Thanks for sending me the money. I know that my income must have accumulated all these years to such an extent that a check for a thousand would not mean anything, but it was nice of you to have made it so easy for me to get it promptly.

"I am not in any trouble and am feeling splendidly. Have met your friend, Mrs. Tennis, and her daughter. She—the daughter and not the mother—is a very pretty girl and she is making my stay at Fort Bliss quite pleasant.

"Dear Mother, will you not come to the realization that I am grown up? Surely if I am old enough to fight for my country, I am old enough to decide my way of living for myself.

"You are very far away from Fort Bliss and, if you will forgive me, I think you are still further away from my newly discovered self.

"Some day when I become better acquainted with this son of yours than I am now, I will introduce him to you—not as you have idealized him, but as he really is.

"Phillip Wynne Tracy IV."

Three days later when Phillip strolled back toward the "narrow street" he found the "high walls pierced by a window and a door—a window and a door" razed to the ground and not a woman to be seen.
